EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report details an intensive round of consultations and observations focussed on community safety and amenity in the City of Port Phillip (CoPP), culminating in a lively and collaborative Roundtable on 19 March 2025, attended by 20 stakeholders from the social services sector and Victoria Police. Further engagements with the community, including residents and local traders took place after the Roundtable. I had the benefit of joining CoPP Local Laws officers on their patrols and saw for myself the circumstances of rough sleepers and encampments.

The issues raised and discussed here are not new and have been almost intractably difficult for local governments in many parts of the world for a long time. There is of course no ‘silver bullet’.

There are recommendations – from the structural to the very practical – for short-, and longer-term actions. They are intended to assist the CoPP to better manage the safety and amenity issues generated by rough sleeping, homelessness and encampments.

I conclude that improvements to community safety, the perception of safety, and the amenity of public places in the CoPP will be likely to occur when there is a combination of, at least, these key elements:

- An increase in resources by Victoria Police to the Neighbourhood Policing model, ensuring consistent Police visibility on the streets of the city, particularly at ‘hot spot’ streets, lanes and carparks;
- An effective system of CoPP Local Laws officers and Victoria Police joint street patrols;
- Maintenance of CoPP’s commitment to a human-rights based policy approach to housing, homelessness and mental health;
- Maintenance of the CoPP’s close collaborative/partnership model with the support sector;
- Strengthening of key support service providers to enable expanded outreach services to their clients, and greater capacity to collaborate with CoPP Local Laws officers and Victoria Police on the ground;
- An increased supply of emergency accommodation;
- Hubs and gathering places for homeless people to spend time during the day.

This report recognises that there are many policy and program strengths in the current approach – the overall CoPP strategy and trajectory on safety and amenity is sound. But simply more of the same will not be acceptable – improvements can and should be made in a number of areas and these are the subject of the recommendations in this report.

INTRODUCTION

There is a long history of the CoPP addressing the issue of community safety and local perceptions of safety in this diverse and changing community. Most recently the Community Safety Plan of 2019 was extended and updated in August 2023 and the Community Amenity Local Law 2023 (the Local Law) enacted. The 2019 Plan has three areas of priority focus: Creating Safe Spaces, Building Resilience and Healthy Living. That plan is currently under review. The review will be informed by the outcomes of this Roundtable process.

At the 24 November 2024 meeting of Council members of the community spoke of their distress, anxiety and fear caused by the behaviour of some rough sleepers camping in their immediate vicinity. On 11 December Councillor Buckingham put forward a motion to the Council.<sup>1</sup> It was passed unanimously.

In the background to her Notice of Motion Cr Buckingham stated, “Concerns have been raised by our community, including traders, about antisocial and illegal behaviour (including public drug and alcohol use, dealing, abuse and harassment of passersby). Council receives many complaints about the issue, its impacts upon amenity, safety, perceptions of safety and the appeal of high streets and other areas as vibrant, attractive and safe places to visit. In many cases those who are involved include people experiencing homelessness, mental health, addiction and other challenges.”

The Motion requests “that City of Port Phillip (CoPP) initiate a Roundtable of key stakeholders, incorporating the City of Port Phillip, health, housing, community legal and social service providers, Victoria Police and other relevant stakeholders or recognised expertise to examine the current situation and review place-based models to address community safety issues in our high streets and surrounding areas.

Requests that the Roundtable:

- a) Provide advice and case studies from other jurisdictions on community outreach models and consider opportunities to ensure best practice in the City of Port Phillip;
- b) Provide advice and case studies from other Council jurisdictions on how Local Laws can be used to provide community safety and protect the amenity of public spaces within the City of Port Phillip. The advice is to include consideration of Police protocols and operations within the City of Melbourne and their applicability to the City of Port Phillip;
- c) Review the merit and feasibility of establishing an ongoing alliance to continue this work over the next four years.
- d) Provide recommendations to Council on the above within the short and long-term.”

On 18 February 2025 the Mayor issued a statement<sup>2</sup> re-affirming the Council’s “commitment to creating a safe, liveable and just community”. She listed the CoPP’s actions that contribute to “creating a safer city” including collaboration with and support for local Police, the work of the Local Laws patrols and Amenity Services, CoPP’s work with, and support for homeless, housing and social support services, investment in activation and improvements of key precincts and how the Victorian government can assist.

This list is clear evidence of good policy and good intent but the amenity and safety issues generated by rough sleeping, particularly encampments, persist and remain extremely challenging.

ROUNDTABLE OBJECTIVES AND METHODOLOGY

Objectives

The objectives of the Roundtable are specified in the Terms of Reference<sup>3</sup>, clearly outlining the three key areas:

1. To review existing and propose new intervention and prevention models (including community legal, drug and alcohol, health, housing, and mental health services) and how they can be implemented and improved in the City of Port Phillip.
2. To explore how Local Laws can be used to improve community safety and the amenity of public spaces within the City of Port Phillip.
3. To consider and recommend actions that can be undertaken by Council, the State Government, Victoria Police, Service Providers and others to improve community safety and the perceptions of safety in the City of Port Phillip.

The focus of this report is on the first and third of the Terms of Reference, however submissions regarding the proposed Local Law changes were received from Roundtable participants and are discussed in Section 1.1. There is a concurrent investigation of the relevant by laws by Council officers pursuant to the resolution of Council of 19 February 2025.

Methodology:

- The Terms of Reference specified that: "Participants will be selected based on:
  - Ensuring a balance across a variety of perspectives (community legal, Police, health, housing and social service providers), and expertise.
  - Consideration for outcomes to include both prevention and treatment initiatives.
  - Helping to understand impact of adverse community safety outcomes."

I am satisfied that the participants at the Roundtable amply met these requirements.

- On 19 March I chaired the Roundtable which was facilitated by Anika Dell and attended by 20 subject matter experts and representatives from 18 organisations (see Attachment B).
- In the weeks surrounding the Roundtable, I met personally with 49 individuals which included representatives of residents, traders, service organisations, relevant Council staff, Police, Aboriginal organisations, and those with lived experience of homelessness, drug & alcohol and mental health issues (see Attachment C).
- I accompanied City Amenity/Local Laws Officers on their morning patrols on three occasions to see first-hand some of the issues of concern and observe the current approach by Council to addressing amenity impacts utilising existing Local Laws.

- I viewed the video of the Council meetings of 27 November 2024 and 11 December 2024 where resident and trader concerns were presented. The impact of the current issues on their lives and livelihoods was clearly evident.
- Pre-meetings prior to the Roundtable with relevant stakeholders provided valuable contextual information regarding the housing, health and legal sectors which helped refine the focus of the Roundtable and guide the discussion on the day.
- A pre-reading pack (see Attachment A) containing information about the local context in Port Phillip and an extensive literature review with examples of existing local, national and international best practice models, was provided to participants prior to the Roundtable session. This information has also informed this report.
- Data from a number of sources relevant to the local context was examined, including Police-recorded crime data, council administrative data and other government datasets.
- At the Roundtable, Council staff attended to take notes of the discussion. Participant input was also recorded via online Padlet contributions, via sticky notes at tables, and on whiteboards. All notes, ideas and contributions were consolidated into electronic format for analysis.
- Councillors had the opportunity to attend the final session of the Roundtable on 19 March to hear the participants report back on their ideas and recommendations.
- Following the Roundtable, participants were invited to make a written submission setting out more formally their position on the issues under consideration. 14 submissions representing 21 organisations were received (see Attachment D).
- I read recommendations of Leanne Mitchell on her 2022 Churchill Fellowship investigation into 'How Councils respond to rough sleeping while balancing responsibilities to the wider community' and note the recommendation that Councils focus on "homelessness beyond rough sleeping".
- I also read a summary of Lucinda Adams' Churchill Fellowship study on addressing 'The negative impact of laws regulating public space on people experiencing homelessness'.
- Each of the consultations, observations, discussions, readings and submissions have been the subject of extensive and careful consideration in the writing of this report and the formulation of its recommendations.

SUMMARY OF ISSUES RAISED BY PARTICIPANTS

In setting out to further define the issue, there was some evidence of conflation of crime and homelessness in the community as they relate to perceptions of safety. They should not be conflated.

I have attempted to define the activities commonly seen or experienced in the City of Port Phillip that are causing concern. These categories are not mutually exclusive and may occur concurrently at different times or places.

- Crime – people experiencing violence - actual or threatened assault, criminal damage, and exposure to visible weapons, from individuals who appear to be drug and/or alcohol affected and/or experiencing a psychotic episode.

- Drug use/dealing – people ‘shooting up’ on the street, openly buying and selling drugs which makes some residents, traders and their customers distinctly uncomfortable and sometimes fearful. This fear may trigger a sense of lawlessness and uncertainty about subsequent erratic/violent behaviour once drugs take effect.
- Visible homelessness – people sleeping rough in shop doorways or on the street causing an obstruction causing discomfort, sometimes fear. Traders are concerned that it drives away customers.
- Encampments – groups of people in carparks, parks or other locations who set up tents and might become noisy, messy, smelly, impacting the amenity of the area for residents who sometimes also feel threatened, and anxious traversing the area, especially at night.
- Disorder - People congregating on the street who may/may not be homeless but may have AOD/mental health issues, might act erratically, noisy, etc. These people may be “hanging out” and socialising on the street with unhoused peers during the day. Ngwala Willumbong uses the term “people experiencing street-based living”.

These issues are occurring across the CoPP, however not at a uniform level. There are pockets of more intense activity: high streets in Balaclava, St Kilda, Port Melbourne, and South Melbourne. My consultation with residents and traders also identified broader concerns about crime occurring within the municipality, including burglary, car theft, and even organised crime. Local Police recorded crime rates have risen by 19% over the last year<sup>4</sup> in a return to pre-Covid levels, and whilst I acknowledge the reality and impact of this concern, crime per se is not the main focus of this report.

It became evident that there are quite different viewpoints within the community regarding these issues: one holds that this is part of life in Port Phillip, the diversity is what makes it a vibrant place to live, they generally feel safe in the area and there is, historically, a high degree of tolerance for homelessness and some level of erratic and unusual behaviour. Another viewpoint holds that the disorder is evidence of lawlessness and breakdown; the community shouldn’t have to tolerate it, children shouldn’t be exposed to it, and their poor perceptions of safety are seriously impacting their quality of life. Finding the balance between these competing viewpoints to ensure a “Liveable and Vibrant city”, and a safe city, is the difficult task that Councillors and the CoPP are daily engaged in.

I note that although individual perceptions of crime and safety are not always aligned with recorded crime data or actual risk of crime victimisation, fear of crime can have a significant impact on quality of life whether it is well-founded or not. Research indicates that people tend to associate low-level neighbourhood disorder and certain social groups with higher subjective risks of victimisation.<sup>5</sup> The same research also found that where people engage in ‘prosocial’ activities in response to concerns about crime (such as discussing the issue with their neighbours, volunteering in their community, joining a local sporting or social group, seeking advice from police or the local council) their sense of connection and belonging in their neighbourhood increases, and their perceptions of safety similarly increase.<sup>6</sup>

DETAILED EXPLORATION OF ISSUES

1. Policing and enforcement

1.1. Local Laws and regulatory framework

An objective of the Roundtable, and the second Term of Reference, was to “explore how the use of Local Laws could improve community safety and the amenity of public spaces within the city of Port Phillip” as per Cr Hardy’s February Notice of Motion of 19 February 2025. This element of the Roundtable was the subject of intense discussion and was given emphasis in the written submissions from the support service, Police and legal sectors. It also received considerable attention in the media, where the proposed changes to bylaws were frequently framed as the Council planning to “criminalise homelessness”<sup>7</sup> by removing the exemption for camping on council land if a person is homeless or has complex needs (Section 42(2), Community Amenity Local Laws 2023).

It is important to note that there is a concurrent and separate “investigation” by Council officers of three by laws (17 (1) (b), 42 and 43 of Community Amenity Local Laws 2023) pursuant to the 19 February resolution, and I do not comment in this report on the wording or operation of those by laws other than one aspect of by law 42. Before doing so I address the approach of the Local Laws officers and Victoria Police officers to the application and enforcement of the by laws.

LOCAL LAWS OFFICERS

I set out here the current approach by the CoPP to addressing rough sleeping within the municipality as I observed it in action on three occasions and from discussions with management at the CoPP.

The CoPP deploys Local Laws Officers who work on the streets every day of the year. They work across the whole city and focus intensely on known hotspots, and areas where there have been complaints by residents. They work in teams of 2-3 and start early in the morning. They know most of the rough sleepers by name and treat them fairly, but firmly. They speak to rough sleepers individually, ask them to clean up their camps and belongings, and tell them that the officers will be returning to check on them. The officers contact, or attempt to contact, local support services who they know are working with particular individuals. They ask Victoria Police for back up when confronting more dangerous or volatile situations. The Local Laws officers perform a critical task and perform it very impressively. They clearly have the confidence of residents, traders and the grudging respect of many of the campers. They are unarmed and exposed to personal risk in some situations. They rely, appropriately, on their communication skills and bring a mix of fairness, firmness, compassion and pragmatism to the task.

Where Local Laws Officers identify other categories of people camping or sleeping in public areas such as backpackers or tourists, they are advised of the prohibitions on this behaviour and the fines they will incur if they don’t comply. When appropriate they also issue infringement notices.

POLICING

The Victoria Police submission described its current approach as follows:

The policing response to date has been one of enforcement, joint patrols with City of Port Phillip Local Laws Officers and engagement with social welfare agencies. Outside of a regular presence by the Neighbourhood Policing Team, Operation LION is a standing operation deployed to target encampments in commercial zones such as Fitzroy Street, which is a significant driver of complaints from across the community. Operation LION, whilst having a foundation in enforcement and disruption, also sees our members engage with social and support services as a matter of practice.

Operation LION is an intensive fixed period focus on crime and anti-social behaviour in and around encampments and has been undertaken during August, November 2024 and March 2025 over the course of 14 – 21 days at a time. Operation LION sees a heavy Police investment in human resources and specialist policing services, however routinely yields low offending data resulting in short term positive outcomes with little or no impact on the foundational issue of the encampments themselves.

My observation is that Victoria Police appears not to be routinely deploying officers to the streets and hotspots, whether under the banner of Operation LION, or otherwise. Routine joint patrols with Council Local Laws officers are needed. Daily joint patrols, which engage with the relevant support agencies on the ground, should become a high priority and should take place on a systematic, coordinated basis. This should be the norm. The current practice of Police providing ad hoc back up (when available) to Local Laws officers is unsatisfactory; it does not inspire community confidence and contributes to a perception of reduced safety. I acknowledge that resourcing, recruiting and rostering are issues here, but this is a fundamentally important safety issue in this city.

In this context I reviewed the report on the 'Adoption of Community Amenity Local Law 2023'. which went to Council on 21 June 2023 and noted the reported high level of community support for Clause 17 (behaviour on Council land) and Clause 43 (safety risks created by furniture on Council land and footpaths). I note also that under the heading 'Key considerations' regarding the proposed local law, there were quite low feedback numbers from the community on camps, gatherings, anti-social behaviour and drug use. However, as consultations with residents and traders have shown there is now, two years on, serious concern about them. I note here in that report, under 'Key considerations' was the statement "Council will continue to work with Victoria Police in relation to community safety, and advocate for increased police visibility, and consistent joint patrols of our high streets". Council's advocacy for this outcome will need to remain consistently strong.

BY LAW 42

This by law prohibits camping on Council land or in a public place, but people who are homeless or have "complex needs" are effectively exempted from that prohibition (Section 42(2), Community Amenity Local Laws 2023).

The proposed by law changes were discussed at the Roundtable session on 19 March, with attendees invited to add commentary to an online Padlet board outlining anticipated impacts of the changes for their organisations and the cohorts they work with. Comments on the proposed changes were also provided in a number of the submissions received. The main focus was on the proposed removal of the exemptions in by law 42 for homeless and those with “complex needs”. The general sentiment about the impact of Local Laws changes was overwhelmingly negative, with stakeholders (apart from Victoria Police) viewing them as ineffective, damaging, and counterproductive. Service provider respondents expressed serious concerns about the repercussions of bringing already vulnerable populations into contact with the justice system, potentially increasing stress, distress, and worsening housing stability and mental health. It was noted that the sanction available to Local Laws officers for noncompliance is the imposition of a fine, and Southside Justice made the point that 98% of fines review applications submitted on behalf of their clients resulted in fines being waived.

Given the resources Council and local support services will ultimately commit to issuing, processing, enforcing and then challenging and processing the withdrawal of such fines and the further harm and trauma caused along the way, we believe seeking to rely further on Local Laws is unproductive. (Southside Justice Submission)

I agree with this submission and note that issuing infringements to rough sleepers is not the preferred practice of CoPP Local Laws officers.

Given the strength of the consensus in relation to the proposed, removal by law 42 exemptions, it seems to me that the proposed by law change would potentially put at risk the excellent working relationship/partnerships that the CoPP has built up over time with many of the key support service providers - a relationship of trust. They praise CoPP's commitment to the human rights principles inherent in the exemptions. These are critical relationships and partnerships; the potential damage to CoPP's reputation would be a high price to pay. I note also the potential adverse impact on Aboriginal community members of increased enforcement. Ngwala Willumbong put this concern as follows:

Aboriginal people will be disproportionately targeted and impacted by these proposed by laws. Reasons for this include the Cultural practice of gathering in community groups, which makes us more vulnerable to compliance measures, and escalation of behaviours which can lead to arrest and incarceration. Unconscious bias, racism and discrimination are issues that always impact our community particularly around compliance. (Ngwala Willumbong Submission)

Victoria Police played a constructive role in the Roundtable process and put forward a submission, which I quote:

An examination of the social and legal landscape reveals the City of Port Phillip's Local Laws to be inadequate in their ability to limit or stop the encampments. The existing provisions and exemptions within the relevant Local Laws, in particular Local Law 42, appears to have enabled growth in encampments and a degree of permanency at some locations. As a result, there is a heavy and ever-increasing reliance on Police by the community to regulate behaviour within the encampments.

I have addressed councillors [...] on this challenge on two occasions in the preceding months. I support councillors in their commitment to local law reform including but not limited to Local Law 17, Local Law 42 and Local Law 43 and encourage council to continue to consult with Victoria Police to ensure the workability of such reforms. (Victoria Police submission)

The exemptions are grounded in principles of compassion and human rights. They are consistent with the CoPP's policy approach to vulnerable and disadvantaged members of the community. Their preservation will not limit or compromise the use of Police powers to enforce the criminal law, or the persuasive/supportive influence of Local Laws officers on rough sleepers. And, as a number of submissions argued, the blunt instrument of infringement notices will not deter people who have no, or very few options, and who can't or won't pay fines.

Ultimately, as I see it, removing the exemptions, will not help to "improve public safety" or amenity in the City of Port Phillip. What will be far more likely to do so will be a continuation of the CoPP's existing human rights approach to housing, homelessness and mental health in combination with an increase in resources by Victoria Police to the neighbourhood policing model and joint patrols with CoPP Local Laws officers.

1.2. Homelessness Operating Protocol

As outlined above, Victoria Police responded favourably to the proposed Local Laws changes while noting that the "principal remedies to these challenges sit within the remit of social and therapeutic intervention and housing" and suggesting a tiered on-the-ground response to the effecting of the Local Laws as follows:

1. Assessment – that social and therapeutic agencies swiftly determine needs and alternative living, sleeping, medical and gathering arrangements are implemented should they be determined.
2. Intervention - that social and therapeutic intervention is undertaken primarily, intervention is swift and alternative living, sleeping, and gathering arrangements are implemented.
3. Enforcement - is undertaken by Local Laws Officers and the Neighbourhood Policing Team to dismantle encampments occupied by those who have rejected support, or whom have been deemed as not requiring support. (Victoria Police submission)<sup>8</sup>

A tiered approach with certainty of responsibility and action has merit, and I note that the idea of a Homelessness Protocol or Operating Policy agreed upon by council, Police and relevant service providers received support during my consultations. The development of such a protocol should be a priority.

Southside Justice suggest that "CoPP could consider developing a more detailed operating protocol for its existing local law, in consultation with the organisations involved in the Community Safety Roundtable and adopting a trauma-informed, culturally safe and human rights-based approach, particularly to guide Local Laws officers in the exercise of their existing powers". I agree.

CoPP developed a Homelessness Protocol in 2001, which was updated in 2011 into the Protocol for Assisting People Sleeping Rough.<sup>9</sup> These documents were developed in consultation with housing and social support agencies and people experiencing homelessness in the City of Port Phillip. They affirm Council's stance that housing is a human right, and homelessness itself is not an issue requiring enforcement of any kind.<sup>10</sup> While clearly setting out actions for CoPP staff to follow in various scenarios, and updated to include Port Phillip Zero processes, the Protocol does not include an active role for Victoria Police beyond responding to 000 calls. Having protocols defining the processes, responsibilities and pathways for dealing with the common situations encountered by Council staff enshrined in protocols, to guide CoPP officers, Police, and support agencies will be a necessary development. Such a protocol would express the active role for Victoria Police to be more than simply responding to 000 calls. As important as 000 calls are, an increase by Victoria Police in resourcing of the local Neighbourhood Policing model, and a collaborative working relationship with the CoPP officers and homeless/health outreach support services is where the solutions lie.

<sup>8</sup> After discussion with Victoria Police the order of these tiered actions was altered to place Assessment before Intervention – the order here therefore differs from their written submission.

I note the current example of the City of Melbourne's Homeless Operating Protocol/Policy Operating Statement (see Attachment E) which formalises the protocols and operating policies that apply to interactions with rough sleepers.<sup>11</sup> The Protocol is signed by the City of Melbourne and Victoria Police and describes the operating partnership approach between Council, Police, the Department of Families, Fairness and Housing (formerly DHHS) and service providers.

I recommend the CoPP work with Victoria Police, homeless sector partners and relevant state government agencies to develop, operationalise and trial a similar Homelessness Operating Protocol. Ideally, this protocol details the trauma-informed, culturally safe and human rights-based approach Council has historically taken to balance the rights of all people to be in public places, while respecting the right of communities to live in a safe and peaceful environment. The focus should be on assessing and responding to situations where there are evident safety or amenity impacts that require active intervention. CoPP should consult with Ngwala Willumbong on whether to include specific considerations in the Protocol for Aboriginal community members. A trial period with clear evaluation measures, and regular opportunities for review with all partners will be essential for maintaining trust and building on lessons learned to achieve the best possible outcomes.

1.3. Joint/welfare patrols

The Roundtable consultations identified a diverse and sometimes contrasting set of views on the role of Police patrols in the current context. Some traders and residents urged Council to lobby the State Government for more Police resourcing and visible, round-the-clock patrols to deal with crime and antisocial behaviour (citing St Kilda's status as a major tourist precinct). There is a legitimate community expectation that Police resources will be effectively applied to dealing with crime. At the same time there can be little doubt that policing that follows a Neighbourhood Policing model of foot and/or bicycle patrols combined with community engagement and problem solving is likely to have positive effects on actual and perceived safety within the CoPP (see Neighbourhood Policing below).

There was also a recognition that Police enforcement patrols as a one-dimensional response to visible homelessness, mental health incidents and substance dependence, is likely to be ineffective and counterproductive. As numerous submissions and consultations made abundantly clear: homelessness is not a crime, and it is wrong to conflate homelessness with criminality.

There was, however, general agreement on the need for regular welfare-based joint patrols or alternate first responder model that bring together some combination of Police, Council Local Laws officers, outreach services and peer workers to provide immediate practical support and crisis intervention. These teams would prioritise engagement, de-escalation, and service referrals before enforcement. As Southside Justice note: The CoPP is fortunate to have local services that already have enormous skill and experience in deploying a harm reduction and public health response to situations that were once considered law enforcement matters and could draw further on this resource. I agree.

South Port Community Housing Group suggested investing in brokered, intensive case management services and embedding support workers alongside Local Laws staff as a potential model. Windana recommended a welfare-based patrol model, where peer workers or outreach staff accompany Local Laws officers and Police, making contact more trauma-informed and service-focused. Ngwala Willumbong proposed establishing a dedicated Aboriginal Community Liaison Officer (ACLO) rather than a Police Aboriginal Liaison Officer (PALO) in Port Phillip Police Service Area to improve interactions between Victoria Police and Aboriginal people experiencing homelessness<sup>12</sup>. There is currently one ACLO based in Dandenong servicing the entire Southern Metropolitan Police Region. This is clearly inadequate. Ngwala indicated they would consider supporting joint patrols when they are culturally safe, well-trained, and focus on support and diversion, rather than compliance.

Carlisle Street Traders Association calls for a Specially Trained Safety Response Team, including on-call patrols that can respond to drug use, chronic homelessness, and mental health incidents.

The development of any model that involves welfare-based joint patrols should be extensively co-designed with key stakeholders, subject to an initial pilot, with transparency and accountability measures built in, and a robust evaluation of its effectiveness undertaken before longer term adoption of the model.

Victoria Police's submission to the Roundtable described their current practice this way:

The policing response to date has been one of enforcement, joint patrols with City of Port Phillip Local Laws Officers and engagement with social welfare agencies. ...There is a need for a greater role played by social and therapeutic services. (Victoria Police submission)

It appears that joint patrols between Police and Local Laws officers are not currently systematised but occur on an ad hoc basis depending on resourcing demands within the Police Service Area (PSA). There is, as the Victoria Police submission puts it, a critically important role for “social and therapeutic intervention and housing,” but the solutions will actually lie in a broader systematic, cohesive and coordinated approach - joint patrols with CoPP officers, and close collaboration with support services.

1.4. Neighbourhood Policing

The Neighbourhood Policing team at Port Phillip Police Service Area is small - as I understand it, four officers. Although they are in daily contact with CoPP Local Laws officers re rosters, they often get pulled away for other duties or on leave. The result is they are not consistently, routinely available for daily patrols.

Research indicates that random or reactive Police patrols have no crime reduction effect, however targeted foot patrols implemented alongside positive community engagement and problem-solving can reduce crime as well as increase perceptions of safety and confidence in Police.<sup>13</sup>

Victoria Police has a stated organisational commitment to a Neighbourhood Policing approach where Local Safety Committees made up of community groups, government and business stakeholders work together with Police to adopt a problem-solving response to local community safety issues.<sup>14</sup> The Port Phillip Police Service Area hosted a Neighbourhood Policing Forum in December 2024 which was attended by over 100 people, and the top three local safety concerns were presented: 1. Safety in public places 2. Safety of property and possessions 3. Drugs and alcohol.

The promise of Neighbourhood Policing as a vehicle for a prevention -first approach to community safety that prioritises local concerns and works in partnership to solve problems using policing and non-policing interventions, seems a perfect fit for the issues being experienced in the City of Port Phillip. I commend the Neighbourhood Policing approach as an essential policing strategy in the Port Phillip PSA and recommend that a collaborative and accountable Local Safety Committee<sup>15</sup> be instigated as a matter of urgency in accordance with the Neighbourhood Policing Framework.<sup>16</sup>

Recommendations:

1. An increase in resources by Victoria Police to the Neighbourhood Policing model in the Port Phillip Police Service Area with an increase in foot patrols, local engagement and problem solving, particularly in identified community safety "hotspots". The CoPP to continue advocating for this model and working with Victoria Police on its implementation.
2. Advocate for an ACLO role specific to the Port Phillip Police Service Area.
3. Develop and pilot a welfare-based model of joint patrols with Victoria Police, CoPP Local Laws, outreach workers, peer supports and other services to engage with rough sleepers and those with complex needs.
4. Work with relevant agencies to develop a formal partnership agreement between Victoria Police and CoPP for an effective, coordinated response to homelessness – taking guidance from the City of Melbourne and Victoria Police's Homelessness Operating Protocol /Policy Operating Statement (see Attachment E)
5. Work closely with local services to update CoPP's Protocol for Assisting People Sleeping Rough to ensure it reflects a culturally safe, trauma-informed, human rights based non-enforcement approach. This should be developed in tandem with the formal Police/CoPP Protocol referred to above.
6. Confirm adequacy of current by laws, emphasizing the need for effective implementation and coordination rather than legislative change.
7. CoPP and Victoria Police protocols guiding the frontline role of Victoria Police engaged in homelessness response should emphasise rapid social and therapeutic intervention (problem solving) as the primary goal, with enforcement actions being secondary, or a last resort.

2. Housing and accommodation

Much of the focus of the Roundtable consultations has been on housing. It is a key part of this report for these reasons:

- The perception of safety by members of the community, and the amenity of public places and spaces is often affected by rough sleeping and encampments of rough sleepers- generally people who are either homeless or who have chosen not to sleep in their houses, flats or rooms because of their perceived lack of safety, or for social gathering reasons. Homelessness is integrally tied in with community perceptions of safety and as mentioned above it is frequently conflated with crime, or heightened fear of crime.
- Submissions came from organisations with deep experience in dealing with the matrix of homelessness, health, legal and social disadvantage issues. They accept the implications and impacts of homelessness on perceptions of safety and amenity. Their submissions argue for greater investment in social housing and other forms of accommodation for their clients because housing is a foundation of health and stability. They are strongly supported in this contention by worldwide research and experience, and by the CoPP's own commitment over time to the principle of "Housing First".
- It is not suggested that housing alone is the solution to increasing crime, and it is not a panacea for all social problems. But there can be no doubt that housing the homeless is a fundamental ingredient in any attempt to ameliorate the impacts of rough sleepers, and rough sleeping encampments on perceptions of safety in the community.

2.1 Housing shortfall

It is apparent that there is a significant shortfall of affordable housing and emergency accommodation in the City of Port Phillip, despite significant investment by all three levels of government, social investors and the service sector over the last decade. Some of the groups particularly feeling the impact of the housing crisis include women escaping family violence, unwaged or low waged families, older people, Aboriginal people, and those with complex mental and physical health challenges and/or justice system involvement.

Many of the organisations consulted stressed that the root cause of visible rough sleeping and related safety concerns is the lack of emergency and long-term housing, compounded by inadequate support services for those with complex needs. The provision of housing alone is insufficient to address the needs of many within the complex cohort of rough sleepers. Many require significant, sustained support with daily living tasks in order to successfully navigate the path out of chronic homelessness. A chronic lack of beds in mental health and drug/alcohol rehabilitation facilities throughout the state is also a significant factor in people cycling in and out of homelessness and into criminal legal system involvement.

There was strong, aligned agreement across service providers, housing groups, and community representatives involved in the Roundtable process that the availability of emergency, transitional, and supportive housing in Port Phillip is grossly inadequate for current needs. Without immediate investment, vulnerable cohorts—especially First Nations people, older women, and those with dual diagnosis—will remain at risk of rough sleeping and entrenched homelessness, with downstream impacts on public safety, justice, and health systems.

Despite Council's significant investment in projects such as Wellington Street Common Ground, South Port Community Housing noted Council's In Our Backyard, Growing Affordable Housing in Port Phillip 2015-2025 Plan which has not met its targets for the number of dwellings created or the transfer of Council land for affordable housing developments. Sacred Heart Mission recommends that Council utilise its influence to advocate for greater investment in public and social housing, including fast-tracking developments and repurposing vacant properties.

Numerous programs that support emergency and transitional housing face imminent funding lapses (e.g., Sacred Heart Mission's GreenLight, Ngwala's Entry Point, SKCH's PASH model). There is an urgent need to review these and consider available avenues of funding support. 2.2 Wellington Street Common Ground Project

The Wellington Street Common Ground (WSCG) project is being delivered by St Kilda Community Housing and will be completed by mid-2025. It will comprise 26 permanent self-contained units of supported social housing using the evidence-based Housing First approach, which is designed to address the multiple and complex needs of people who have been sleeping rough, and the Common Ground model, that supports residents with complex needs who were previously sleeping rough to maintain their housing and reconnect with their community. Persons to be housed will be allocated from the Port Phillip Zero program's 'By-Name List' (see 4.1 Port Phillip Zero).

The project has been funded by:

- The Victorian Government, which is providing a $5.8 million capital grant under its Big Housing Build, and a $6 million operating subsidy over four years.
- The City of Port Phillip, which is providing a $4.755 million capital grant, and transfer of a surplus lane ($365,000 value in 2022), which was located on the property driveway.<sup>17</sup>

The WSCG project is broadly recognised as a cornerstone initiative in Port Phillip's homelessness response. Submissions affirm its value not just in providing housing, but also in shifting public perception and community safety through a stable, supportive model. At the same time, stakeholders emphasised the urgency of scaling up and resourcing similar projects, ensuring they are inclusive, culturally appropriate, and well-integrated with the broader support ecosystem.

Port Phillip Zero note: "This new and soon to start tenanting initiative should be supported with additional resourcing to ensure culturally safe alcohol and other drug, legal, and mental health services are provided through a combination of support from First Step, Ngwala Willumbong, Better Health Network and Alfred Health."

Ngwala note: "For our community, who have strong ties to the St Kilda area, tenancies such as Wellington Street Common Ground are crucial to ending Aboriginal homelessness, sustaining tenancies and reducing the risk of re-entry into homelessness. We support further investment into supported housing with a Culturally specific component of support."

2.3 St Kilda Community Housing (SKCH) and Ngwala Willumbong: The "Four-Building Solution"

SKCH and Ngwala propose scaling up the WSCG model through a complementary four-building solution, using a mix of repurposed and new buildings to permanently house 52 rough sleepers—most of whom are already on the Port Phillip Zero By-Name List.

This includes:

1. Wellington Street Common Ground (publicly owned, managed by SKCH) – 26 residents, project almost completed.
2. [REDACTED] (publicly owned, managed by SKCH) – 18 residents, plus an office for visiting support services.
3. [REDACTED] Safe Grounds (publicly owned, managed by SKCH) – Housing 8-10 Aboriginal men per year with complex trauma, with wraparound support from Ngwala.
4. A future fourth building, with funds to be raised for purchase or construction.

Their proposed Permanent Affordable Supportive Housing (PASH) model complements WSCG with lower-cost, scalable alternatives that maintain many benefits of traditional supportive housing. The aim is to avoid the revolving door of evictions that commonly occur when vulnerable renters accrue arrears, cause property damage that they cannot repay, or are consistently disruptive to other tenants. PASH aims to deliver intensive, persistent, proactive and assertive tenancy management underpinned by Housing First principles. The model outlined in SCH's submission would require state government investment as well as Council contributions and high levels of cooperation among service providers. The model appears to be well-developed and costed, able to be implemented rapidly, and targets the cohort most likely to impact local concerns about safety and amenity. This appears to be a compelling initiative, and I recommend that Council consider implementing the approach as a matter of priority.

Accessed 12/4/25

2.4 Staying housed

Some of the people engaged in street-based living who are coming to the attention of Council, Police and service providers are found to have housing tenancies of some kind and are therefore technically not in the 'homeless' category. This has implications for the kind of supports available to them and for the potential application of local law exemptions.

There are many reasons why a 'housed' person may be sleeping rough. I heard from more than one service provider about people with tenancies in public housing estates who feel so unsafe in their home that they prefer to sleep on the streets. I heard that the chaos and trauma for some people is so extreme that daily living tasks such as keeping track of house keys is almost impossible without significant support. I also heard from Ngwala:

Often our community members have tenancies which are located far from their kinship and community ties. Further, Rough Sleepers are often lacking the skills to sustain a tenancy and have no ongoing tenancy support. These community members are not eligible for support outside of Ngwala's services, due to having a tenancy. Ngwala provides services to this cohort, however, housing options are dependent on non-Aboriginal services. As we are all aware, there is a lack of public and social housing which further impacts the health of tenancies. People are often housed in areas which isolate them resulting in failed tenancies.

(Ngwala Willumbong submission)

I consider it unhelpful to refer to this cohort as 'purportedly homeless' and prefer the term 'engaged in street-based living' which recognises the reality of factors and constrained choices that some particularly vulnerable individuals must make on a daily basis.

Ending homelessness for people with complex needs requires much more than simply providing a house. Wraparound, intensive support (including Intensive Tenancy Management) is often required to ensure these people can maintain their housing in the face of physical and mental health challenges, family and other violence, addiction, justice system interaction, disability, extreme poverty and social isolation.

Recommendations

8. Conduct an immediate audit of available housing and emergency accommodation along with options for transfer/use/repurposing of Council owned land for affordable housing development.
9. Identify and establish new emergency and short-term accommodation options, with culturally appropriate spaces specifically for Aboriginal people.
10. Ensure adequate provision of supports to assist individuals in maintaining long-term housing placements.
11. Consider CoPP support for the St Kilda Community Housing “Four Building Solution” detailed in their submission- noting that it has been costed. Consider staged implementation as soon as possible.

3. Support services and service provider response

3.1 Assertive outreach /early intervention

Throughout the Roundtable consultation and submissions, assertive outreach was consistently raised as a core mechanism for reducing rough sleeping, decreasing anti-social behaviour, building trust and diverting people from punitive systems into therapeutic supports. Assertive outreach can be defined as a proactive engagement model where workers go into public spaces to identify, build relationships with, and provide support to people experiencing homelessness, particularly those with complex needs who are disconnected from mainstream services. Essentially it is “meeting people where they are”.

A particularly striking example of this in action was shared with me by a person with lived experience of rough sleeping and drug addiction. Their first meaningful interaction with a service provider was when an outreach worker simply offered: “Let’s get you healthy”. This proved to be a turning point in their journey back to stable housing and out of addiction. Many examples of effective outreach and early intervention programs and services were shared with me, including the following:

- Greenlight Supportive Housing Program (Sacred Heart Mission)
- Journey 2 Social Inclusion (Sacred Heart Mission)
- Living Free Project (Windana)
- Dedicated Intensive Brokered In-Reach Trial (South Port Community Housing)
- Assertive InReach (Port Phillip Community Group)

Funding for these programs is often minuscule and insecure (eg. Greenlight funding is due to lapse on 30 June 2025). I recommend a desktop review of current outreach services operating within the CoPP to identify any duplication or opportunities for agencies to better coordinate their efforts and/or collaborate to secure funding from alternate sources.

3.2 Case management

Case management was mentioned multiple times during the Roundtable discussions, as a critical but under-resourced element of effective support for people experiencing homelessness, addiction, and complex social issues. There was concern that the current service model allows people to fall through the cracks when they transition between systems such as leaving detox or rehab, exiting prison or remand, or moving between housing types. A participant noted “the current funding doesn’t follow a person’s journey”, requiring people to retell their story repeatedly to different services which can be retraumatising.

I heard that outreach workers were seen as vital in the initial engagement and coordination of support, but they’re often stretched thin or lack the capacity to provide the deep, ongoing casework that enables real progress for people facing complex challenges.

Consultations also reinforced the need for case management, housing and other supports to be culturally safe for specific cohorts in need of particularly safe care – Aboriginal people, members of the LGBTQI community, those experiencing family violence, and people exiting prison. I encourage all service agencies to bring an intersectional lens to their organisations and practice.

3.3 After hours support

A frequently raised concern during consultations was the lack of adequate after-hours and weekend outreach support creating gaps in care, making it challenging for service providers to respond effectively to urgent issues outside standard business hours. Local Laws Officers felt hamstrung when patrolling early in the morning and being unable to raise support for people in need until agency offices open at 8 or 9am, or at all on weekends. Similarly, Police and council officers responding to after-hours noise and behaviour complaints that could potentially be de-escalated by appropriately skilled and trusted community/support workers find it not possible to get in contact with the right people who can attend and deal with the situation.

In my opinion appropriately resourcing select key agencies to provide this level of 24/7 on-call service would likely have a very positive impact on safety and amenity for the entire Port Phillip community. This gap is something Council should consider in its service agreements with support agencies and as part of the development of joint patrols (see 1.3) and a Homeless Operating Protocol (see 1.2). The effective coordination of these after hours responses would be a key responsibility of the Council internal outreach role I have recommended below (see 4).

3.4 Crisis response – who is responsible?

A matter of significant concern to the community and to service providers, which became very apparent through the Roundtable process, is that of responding to people who are experiencing acute mental health or psychotic episodes which might be related to drug and/or alcohol use. These people may or may not be homeless, but as Sacred Heart Mission note:

In our experience, people who have been rough sleeping for extensive periods of time have significant trauma, untreated mental health and substance use. This often leads to complex behaviours, including repeated evictions from previous housing and crisis accommodation. It is well understood that people’s experiences of trauma can lead to adaptive behaviours that present as high-risk - aggression, difficulties with emotional regulation and paranoia. (Sacred Heart Mission submission)

This is a serious perception of safety issue. Witnessing these behaviours in public can be frightening for other members of the community, and there appears to be uncertainty over how to deal with incidents as they unfold, even among first responding agencies. The Mental Health Royal Commission recommended ambulances as first responders to mental health callouts rather than

Police, a recommendation which was accepted by the state government and budgeted, but which has not commenced.<sup>18</sup>

There are several programs and teams that can respond to homeless people experiencing severe mental health episodes. These include the Homeless Outreach Psychiatric Service (HOPS), Police and CATT Early Response (PACER) and the Crisis Assessment Treatment (CAT) Team.<sup>19</sup>

My understanding of the homeless mental health emergency response system is as follows:

Homeless Mental Health Crisis Response Programs

Program	Description	Activation	Crisis Role	Relationship
HOPS	Outreach for homelessness	Scheduled support	Builds trust, psychiatric support	Refers to CAT for urgent needs
PACER	Police + Ambulance + Clinician team	Triggered by emergencies	On-site crisis triage	Clinician often seconded from CAT
CAT Team	Clinical crisis team	Community referrals	24/7 mobile crisis response	Backbone of crisis care

The question of who can summon the CAT and PACER teams was a recurring one that leads to some confusion. Police might be reluctant to intervene in acute mental health incidents in the absence of ambulance personnel, but ambulance personnel may have legitimate safety concerns when responding if Police are not present. The PACER program is intended to address this, however in practice it was reported to me that due to a lack of resources the response time for the PACER team is often unacceptably slow, leading to poor outcomes for individuals and the broader community.

An associated concern raised by service providers is the question of what is to be done when people are taken to hospital Emergency Departments, refuse to be assessed, and are subsequently discharged back into homelessness without treatment or support. There appears to be a lack of clearly identified pathways and processes for crisis intervention and ongoing support for homeless people experiencing acute mental health episodes. I frequently heard that the HOPS service is grossly underfunded, and that the current systems don't accommodate cultural needs or the realities of trauma in First Nations communities.

These are glaring gaps and issues of high/urgent priority requiring a coordinated advocacy campaign by Council and relevant stakeholders to push for improvements to HOPS & PACERs resourcing and capacity, and the resourcing and capacity of other mental health support programs. Port Phillip Zero recommend Council play a leadership role in advocating for "legislative changes to ensure a more balanced approach to mental health care, particularly around involuntary admissions for at-risk individuals" (Port Phillip Zero submission).

<https://www.alfredhealth.org.au/services/homeless-outreach-psychiatric-service> Accessed 28/4/25

An issue raised by Alfred Health psychiatry outreach staff relates to being unable to provide home visits to some clients because of unsafe conditions at public housing estates, leading to relapses and sometimes tenancy loss if people can't maintain their treatment. This requires further investigation.

Recommendations

12. Maintain and enhance existing partnership protocols among CoPP, Victoria Police, and key service providers (e.g., Launch, Access Health, Ngwala Willumbong).
13. Continue to support and adequately fund service providers demonstrating effectiveness, particularly those working with high-impact cohorts (individuals leaving prison, mental health, or rehabilitation facilities).
14. Lead a coordinated advocacy campaign to increase the resources of PACER and HOPS and advocate for the State Govt to ensure implementation of Mental Health Royal Commission recommendations including transfer of first response to mental health emergency services calls from Police to Ambulance Victoria.
15. Tackle the service gap for responding to people experiencing acute mental health episodes in public places, particularly the gap in culturally appropriate supports for Aboriginal people.

4. Improving partnerships and service coordination

The CoPP has service agreements in place with a number of service providers to support volunteers, information and referral services, food relief and support, legal services, and assertive outreach and support work. This includes funding the Coordinator Rough Sleeper Initiative at Launch Housing as part of Port Phillip Zero.

This investment demonstrates Council's commitment to its housing and homelessness goals and is to be commended. During my consultation for the Roundtable I heard that responsibility for the service agreement contracts sits in a different area of council to the area receiving the service, leading to a potential lack of oversight as to whether best use is being made of the agreement. This siloed approach appears to be hampering best practice in Council's extensive work in the homelessness space.

I also heard that Council's work on this could be strengthened by appointing an internal outreach coordinator to follow up on referrals and act as a conduit for information and communication both within Council and for interacting with external agencies, particularly those with whom Council has service agreements.

4.1. Port Phillip Zero

Port Phillip Zero (PPZ) is a partnership between Council, local organisations<sup>20</sup> and the community that work together to manage amenity of sites and find opportunities to create new housing and reduce rough sleeping. The goal is to end rough sleeping homelessness in the City of Port Phillip by providing appropriate, secure, affordable long-term housing, and support, to all people who are living without a home. It uses a 'housing first' approach that places people experiencing homelessness directly into permanent and safe housing with 'wrap around' support services to address complex needs such as mental health and alcohol and drug support.

<sup>20</sup> Local organisations involved in PPZ include Council, Victoria Police, Alfred Health, Better Health Network, First Step, Housing First, Launch Housing, Ngwala Willumbong Aboriginal Corporation, Port Phillip Community Group, Sacred Heart Mission, Salvation Army, Southern Homeless Services Network, South Port Community Housing Group, Southside Justice, St Kilda Community Housing, Uniting, and Wintringham

PPZ utilises a 'By Name List' (BNL) which is an up-to-date list of everyone known to be sleeping rough, in their cars or in abandoned buildings (squats). The objective of this approach is for all relevant stakeholders to know everyone by name, learn their support and housing requirements and better address their complex needs. The CoPP funds a Coordinator role at Launch Housing to manage the referral and consent procedures. The process seems to work like this:

There was wide recognition of and appreciation for the effective collaborative work of Port Phillip Zero throughout the Roundtable consultations, and its impact has been significant. Sacred Heart Mission notes a 40% decrease in rough sleeping from February 2022 to February 2024, and the Port Phillip Zero submission states rough sleeping has declined from 91 people in June 2018 to less than half that number by March 2025, using the BNL to strategically support individuals into stable housing.

The use of the BNL was repeatedly highlighted as a key strength of PPZ as it allows precise tracking of individuals, their housing status, and required interventions, ensuring services are targeted effectively and continuously updated. This data-led approach was recognised as instrumental in the success of housing placements and long-term stability and Roundtable attendees suggested a similar approach to case management and data should be adopted as standard practice by all agencies.

PPZ was also acknowledged as a progressive, compassionate model aligned with Port Phillip's values and Sacred Heart Mission and Port Phillip Community Group both highlighted CoPP's historically sensitive approach, urging continued investment in this compassionate model rather than punitive measures.

Despite the broad support, several ideas for improvement and expansion were elicited during the Roundtable sessions and consultation. Multiple stakeholders noted that PPZ is overly focused on St Kilda, leaving other parts of the municipality (e.g., Port Melbourne, South Melbourne) underserved. There was some concern that not all relevant agencies are at the table, and suggestions to revisit and diversify the participant list, especially at the executive level. It was suggested that new services, roles (e.g., NDIS Navigators), and sectors like disability support be brought into the PPZ collaborative model to increase the likelihood of getting NDIS packages for eligible individuals.

Stakeholders called for improved communication of PPZ's successes, activities, and methods—both to service providers and the broader community. This included ideas for more public visibility and storytelling about how the model works and what impact it's having.

There was also a call for more direct coordination and communication from the PPZ initiative with Victoria Police regarding community concerns about safety. CoPP Local Law Officers suggested that the weekly hotspot meetings could be more useful by reporting back ("closing the loop") on what actions had been taken by service providers to support particular individuals who had come into contact with the Local Law Team.

4.2. Strengthening the Partnership with Ngwala Willumbong

Ngwala Willumbong is the lead agency in Aboriginal Alcohol and Other Drugs (AOD) and Homelessness support in Victoria. It has two rehabilitation facilities in St Kilda, a Sobering Up Centre (established under the Public Intoxication Response) and the only Aboriginal Homelessness Entry Point in Melbourne which is based in St Kilda. Ngwala provides services within the City of Port Phillip which are Aboriginal specific, outreach based and holistic.

Ngwala currently collaborates with Council in many ways to address Aboriginal community issues, including as part of Port Phillip Zero and the WSCG project. Ngwala has indicated a willingness to strengthen the partnership with Council, though they note our current participation is impacted by resourcing which results in ad-hoc and reactive participation rather than consistent and proactive approaches. If we had a dedicated program to supporting this work, it would ensure consistency in addressing need. (Ngwala Willumbong Submission)

A significant number of the people in the larger camping groups are Aboriginal people and there is a key role to be played by Ngwala Willumbong. It is the agency best placed to intervene, and it can work to assist both the Aboriginal people and the Local Laws officers on the ground. Its role is potentially decisive. Formalising the partnership, increasing information sharing and having a regular presence on joint patrols are actions that can be taken immediately, and to the extent that Ngwala needs more resources, appropriate funding bids should be supported by CoPP.

Recommendations

16. Renew and clearly define service agreements between CoPP and community service agencies, outlining explicit mandates, outreach obligations, required capacities, and accountability mechanisms.
17. Enhance the Port Phillip Zero collaboration, implementing identified improvements based on participant feedback.
18. Establish a dedicated CoPP internal outreach coordinator to ensure effective and assertive 24/7 outreach and response.
19. Extend and formalise the partnership with Ngwala Willumbong, giving due consideration to the need for increased funding, and capacity building.

5. Safe spaces and community hubs

The concept of hubs and gathering spaces enjoys strong, cross-sector support in the submissions. As Port Phillip Zero's submission noted, this is "a long-standing idea whose time has come". These spaces are envisioned not just as shelter alternatives, but as key nodes for care, culture, connection, and community safety. Whether through large-scale facilities like Sacred Heart Mission's Engagement Hub, purpose-built Aboriginal Gathering Places, or multi-service drop-in centres, the underlying vision is one of inclusive, trauma-informed urban spaces that serve both vulnerable populations and broader community interests.

Roundtable participants suggest creating multiple safe, supervised gathering spaces or daytime facilities for social connection, practical support, and engagement in meaningful activities. The aim is to provide low-barrier access with high-service density: combining drop-in elements (showers, meals, lockers) with wraparound support like Alcohol and Other Drug (AOD) counselling, housing and legal services, cultural workers, and mental health clinics. These spaces would help reduce isolation, provide critical social links, and serve as entry points into broader support systems. This includes co-designing culturally appropriate gathering places with the Aboriginal community, ensuring safe environments for culturally sensitive and community-driven engagement. These proposals are practical, collaborative, and represent a clear alternative to criminalisation — one rooted in prevention, healing, and belonging.

The establishment of centrally located, integrated hubs providing multiple essential services (health, legal, housing, Centrelink, substance use, mental health, cultural services, and ID support) in a single, welcoming, and non-judgmental location is not a new idea and has been advocated for over time. Although some hubs like Access Health exist, they currently have limited capacity and capability to fully meet the complex needs of clients all in one location.

Some specific examples/ideas offered in the submissions include:

Ngwala Willumbong

- Proposes a culturally designed, led, responsive and trauma-informed gathering place for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people experiencing homelessness.
- Emphasises this as a non-negotiable cultural practice, not a problem, noting places like Catani Gardens have historically served this role.

- The space would offer food, amenities, support, and safety, addressing mental health, trauma, and isolation while reducing antisocial behaviour.
- Viewed as the most important intervention to reduce rough sleeping and improve safety in Port Phillip.

Port Phillip Community Group

- Recommends councils require communal areas and concierge-style services in public and social housing developments.
- Notes that people living in temporary, or bedsit-style accommodation lack spaces to socialise, often leading them to gather in public.
- Proposes reviving the Alma Road Community House as a community hub for engagement, recreation, and service access.

Port Phillip Zero

- Supports the creation of a "low-barrier, safe gathering space" where people can:
  - Connect with services
  - Engage in recreation
  - Build relationships and community
- Envisions this as a long-overdue initiative that moves people from mere survival to reconnection and long-term stability.

Victoria Police

- Supports establishing a gathering place "away from residential and business zones", allowing for:
  - Orderly congregation
  - Proximity to housing, health, and social support services
  - Reduction of encampments in sensitive commercial areas

Gathering places are seen as an important part of the solution by a number of agencies, particularly for Aboriginal people. Gathering place locations will need to be identified and developed in close consultation with Ngwala Willumbong and other key stakeholders. It is my opinion that their location should be well considered but should not necessarily be required to be "away from residential and business zones".

Participants envisioned hubs and gathering spaces not just as service points, but as community connectors – places that create safety, restore dignity, and provide structure and support in a fragmented system. The emphasis was on co-design, flexibility, inclusion, and local responsiveness to the diverse needs within Port Phillip.

There is a recognition that the location of any hubs and gathering places would need to be carefully considered, having regard to potential or perceived impacts on surrounding properties. In order to mitigate these potential impacts, the following principles should be applied:

- Engage in genuine co-design with residents and businesses nearby — not just service users. Transparent engagement is key to building support. South Port CHG recommends campaigns and dialogue that frame the space as a local safety and wellness asset, not a risk.
- Include lived experience voices in design and operations, ensuring users feel ownership and dignity, while also listening to and incorporating local concerns.
- Establish governance frameworks (like Project Control Groups with diverse membership) to manage ongoing oversight, responsiveness, and accountability — as modelled in St Kilda Community Housing's pilot with Ngwala.
- The site must be well-connected to support services, public transport, and existing outreach pathways. This ensures clients can engage without needing to linger in commercial streets.
- Human-centred branding: Position the hub as a “place of care and connection” — not a crisis facility or containment site. Names, signage, and design should reflect dignity and inclusion.
- “Front of house” for community engagement: Include welcoming entrances, signage, and (for hubs) concierge-style staff presence that reflect the centre's values — respect, dignity, safety — to de-escalate tension, reduce stigma and reassure both users and neighbours.

Recommendations

20. Identify, develop, and sustain accessible, safe daytime social spaces ("hubs") for rough sleepers and vulnerable community members, potentially modelled after existing successful services (e.g., Sacred Heart).
21. Council support the establishment of Community Gathering place that respects gathering as a cultural norm and practice for Aboriginal people.
22. Ensure the development of hubs or gathering places is undertaken utilising strong community development and engagement principles.
23. Map existing drop-in and support services within CoPP to identify service gaps and opportunities for co-location or integration ("wraparound support").

6. Public space design solutions

My consultations and observations revealed that the design of some public spaces is contributing to problems. Research indicates that environmental design (e.g., poorly lit, concealed or vacant areas) contributes significantly to perceptions of safety.<sup>21</sup> Street cleaning, graffiti removal, and maintenance are also widely recognised as contributing to perceptions of safety and economic vitality. In the context of street cleaning, I note the excellent work of the CoPP Rapid Response Cleaning Crew which accompanies the Local Laws Officers each day.

Simple and immediate solutions should be considered as appropriate to deter problematic behaviour in specific locations, although hostile design interventions that increase marginalisation and push vulnerable people into more dangerous areas should be avoided. I heard that existing processes for implementing changes can be cumbersome and time-consuming, meaning responses are delayed and problems escalate. I recommend that these processes be reviewed and simplified as a matter of urgency to enable the implementation of rapid but well-considered infrastructure responses as circumstances require.

Participants suggested activating empty spaces, improving lighting and landscaping to make streets feel safe, and increasing positive activities to enhance community feelings of safety. The recent lighting in the palm trees on Acland Street was proffered as an example of good practice that increased patronage in the area and improved perceptions of safety. Conducting night walking audits with community members can be beneficial in identifying locations for modifications to lighting and streetscapes that will improve actual and perceived safety. Even simple interim measures such as lamps on timers in empty shopfronts that emit a warm glow at night can have a large impact on perceptions.

The use of Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED) principles when built into city planning processes can reduce the likelihood of issues developing down the track. Integrating first generation CPTED ‘target hardening’ techniques with second and third generation CPTED tactics focused on social cohesion and sustainability is an imperative for all Council public space projects.

In short, environmental design doesn’t just shape how a space looks—it directly impacts how safe people feel. Lighting, visibility, activation of spaces, and thoughtful integration of inclusive design principles create a psychological sense of order and care, reducing fear and increasing community cohesion. When the built environment is designed with both security and inclusivity in mind, it becomes a powerful tool in promoting public safety.

6.1. CCTV

During my consultations I note that traders and residents call for increases in public area CCTV. For example, the Fitzroy Street Business Association submits that cameras should be installed permanently in the Jackson St carpark to cover the carpark, the back of the Pride Centre, and Rowland S Howard Lane. It recommends re-aligning the camera on Little Fitzroy St to cover behind the Selina Hotel. I note that there has recently been a mobile CCTV camera stationed in the Jackson St carpark. The Carlisle St Traders Association recommend enhanced street lighting in high-risk areas (Woodstock Street and Dianella Lane behind the Balaclava Hotel,) and the installation of CCTV “in key locations”, highlighting its value in evidence collection and improving Police response.

Most business groups see CCTV as complementary, not a standalone solution or a silver bullet. They often link it with improved lighting, urban activation, and stronger local law enforcement. None of the community or housing-focused submissions argue against CCTV directly, but they generally emphasise housing-first and service-led solutions rather than surveillance-driven ones. The evidence on the effectiveness of public area CCTV as a crime prevention measure is mixed at best.<sup>22</sup> It has been shown to be most effective in car parks for property crime (theft), when combined with other elements such as lighting. It has little effect on spontaneous violent crimes such as street level assaults. There is some evidence of CCTV’s positive impact on perceptions of safety for some members of the community, but for others it can have the opposite effect. There is also the risk of over-surveillance (and over-policing) of marginalised groups. So in determining the placement of CCTV, rights to privacy of homeless people with no alternative but to sleep on the streets, should be taken into account.

Council-owned public space CCTV camera locations are as follows:

- Fitzroy Street, St Kilda
- Little Grey and Grey Streets, St Kilda
- The St Kilda Foreshore
- The Acland Street, St Kilda Entertainment Precinct

As part of the 2024/25 budget process, Council made provision of $800K over the next three years to renew the current network as part of planned maintenance. In 2022 Council purchased a mobile CCTV trailer which is used by Victoria Police under the terms of a loan agreement. Footage from Council's CCTV cameras is streamed live into the Victoria Police station at St Kilda where it can be used to assist with operational response decision-making. Recorded footage can also be retrieved and used retrospectively for investigations. Given Police resourcing constraints, it is unrealistic to expect that Police will be actively monitoring CCTV cameras 24 hours a day. Considering the totality of this evidence, I recommend that as part of the planned renewal and maintenance of the CCTV network Council review the placement of the existing cameras to determine whether any changes should be made to increase the efficacy of its significant investment in this technology.

Recommendations

24. Urgently review and modify problematic public spaces (e.g., Woodstock), applying Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED) principles.
25. Review current processes and establish clear procedures enabling rapid infrastructure interventions in public spaces contributing to unsafe conditions.
26. Elevate consideration of CPTED principles in planning decisions for key developments within CoPP and mandate their use for Council urban design projects.
27. Review the current placement of CCTV cameras to ensure their ongoing value and efficacy to community safety efforts in the CoPP.

7. Addressing stigma and enhancing community understanding

Roundtable participants felt strongly about the need for community education and awareness campaigns to reduce stigma surrounding homelessness and mental health issues. It was felt that encouraging empathy through peer-led consultation and lived-experience narratives can reduce fear and increase perceptions of safety. Providing opportunities for all parties impacted by homelessness to come together to discuss solutions will also increase social cohesion and rebuild a sense of community. There are a number of ways this can be done, and these are discussed below.

7.1. Anti-stigma campaigns

Roundtable participants felt that a crucial element of increasing perceptions of safety within the CoPP should focus on reducing negative perceptions and stigma around homelessness, substance use, mental health, and rough sleeping. Along with impacting community fear about crime, stigma was recognised as a significant barrier preventing vulnerable people from engaging with services and receiving community support.

Some of the ideas suggested at the Roundtable and in subsequent submissions include

- Conduct community education initiatives to inform the general public about homelessness, substance use, and mental health, providing clear, factual information to correct misconceptions and reduce fears. These campaigns would highlight personal stories and lived experiences to humanise affected individuals and groups.
- Actively engage local media outlets to shift negative narratives, promoting stories that build empathy, understanding, and supportive community attitudes. It was suggested to leverage social media strategies that incorporate voices of people with lived experiences, ensuring authenticity and relatability.
- Facilitate forums or "human library" events where community members interact directly with individuals who have experienced homelessness, mental health challenges, or substance use issues. This dialogue-oriented approach was seen as valuable for empathy-building.
- Specifically address cultural stigma, particularly toward Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities. Cultural safety training was recommended for service providers and frontline workers to reduce biases and foster respectful engagements.
- Develop a coordinated, multi-agency approach to ensure consistent messaging across services, council communications, Local Laws teams, Police, and support agencies. Unified messaging was highlighted as essential for effectiveness.

The discussions collectively highlighted the importance of these anti-stigma campaigns as part of a holistic approach to improving community safety, fostering social cohesion, and ensuring effective support for vulnerable populations.

7.2. Ongoing alliance

Cr Buckingham's December Notice of Motion requested that the Roundtable "review the merit and feasibility of establishing an ongoing alliance to continue this work over the next four years".

Throughout my consultations I witnessed a strong commitment from all stakeholders to work together collaboratively on the issues at hand. There was recognition that some alliances and partnerships are working well, and also that some new ways of working are required, with the elevation of additional voices necessary in the conversation.

Southside Justice suggested that an alliance "support and feed into the work of Trauma Aware Port Phillip in educating, supporting and building the skills and resilience of local traders and residents to enhance social cohesion", while Port Phillip Community Group advocated "a council led trauma informed conversation to build the capacity and capability of the traders in the area [that] will assist to navigate the challenges faced by traders".

That an ongoing alliance is required in indisputable, but the form of the alliance, its purpose and the membership thereof is a topic requiring further discussion. Some stakeholders suggested expanding existing alliances such as Port Phillip Zero to include the voices of people with lived experience of sleeping rough and other agencies who have been part of the Roundtable. Many of the ideas and recommendations made in this report would require governance structures of some kind to implement and monitor, such as working groups, that might involve many of the same actors. The answer might lie in a flexible alliance structure that identifies a core, common purpose and then breaks into sub-groups for particular tasks or foci.

I recommend that Council lead the discussion with all relevant parties with a view to identifying the purpose, form and membership of an ongoing alliance that will continue the work in this space over the next four years.

7.3. Community Peacemaking

During my consultations I became aware of an approach to conflict resolution within communities that is being used successfully within the City of Yarra by the Neighbourhood Justice Centre. The Peacemaking Program<sup>23</sup> aims to intervene early and resolve conflicts before formal legal processes are engaged. The conflicts might involve poor behaviour that is not criminal but is fuelling tension. The peacemaking process involves the facilitation of a peacemaking circle where everyone gets to have a say and agreement is reached far more quickly than utilising traditional bureaucratic or legal processes. The program also trains local community members in the peacemaking process, helping them to prevent and resolve conflicts themselves.

I commend the Peacemaking Program to the Port Phillip community as a potential means of resolving community conflict around homelessness, street-based living, and the impacts on residents and traders and urge the Council to consider introducing the Program to the community.

7.4. Trauma Aware Port Phillip

Trauma is at the heart of many of the issues we see playing out on the streets in the City of Port Phillip. The accumulation of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) in the absence of protective relationships and positive experiences can create changes in the developing brain that impact thinking, emotions and behaviour. Many of the individuals experiencing homelessness, mental ill health and drug and alcohol addictions have histories of trauma and abuse. Ngwala Willumbong reminded me that from an Indigenous perspective, that includes the continuing trauma of colonisation.

“Trauma Aware Port Phillip (TAPP) is a community-led, evidence-informed project to strengthen resilience and reduce the impact of trauma and shame in the Port Phillip community.

The TAPP Working Group is a network of individuals, organisations and service providers in the Port Phillip local government area who are collaborating to empower sectors and community to enhance connection and capacity, reduce trauma and shame in everyday interactions, build inclusion, and share knowledge. Through this work we aim to improve community health and wellbeing, increase social cohesion and resilience, support local services sectors, and build sustainable positive change.”<sup>24</sup>

A trauma aware approach has been utilised successfully in Scotland at the national level where the National Trauma Transformation Programme’s vision “is for a trauma informed workforce and services across Scotland, capable of recognising where people are affected by trauma and adversity, that is able to respond in ways that prevent further harm and support recovery, and can address inequalities and improve life chances.”<sup>25</sup> Government agencies, service provider organisations, advocacy groups and professional associations can sign up to a pledge where they agree to:

- Work with others to put trauma-informed and responsive practice in place across our workforce and services.
- Deliver services that wherever possible are actively informed by people with lived experience of trauma.
- Recognise the central importance of relationships that offer collaboration, choice, empowerment, safety and trust as part of a trauma-informed approach.
- Respond in ways that prevent further harm, and that reduce barriers so that people affected by trauma have equal access to the services they need, when they need it, to support their recovery.<sup>26</sup>

Recommendations

28. Develop a community education and awareness anti-stigma campaign targeting perceptions of people experiencing mental health, substance abuse, and homelessness issues, aiming to reduce fear, encourage understanding, and ultimately enhance community safety perceptions.
29. Continue to invest in and publicise the work of the Trauma Aware Port Phillip group with a view to expanding its reach and impact.
30. That Council lead discussions for the establishment of an ongoing alliance that will continue the work in this space over the next four years.
31. That Council consider introducing a Peacemaking Program similar to that operating in the City of Yarra to reduce community conflict.

8. Equipment and resources for council staff

From my direct observations, it is evident that Council Local Laws officers do an excellent job, treating the people they interact with respectfully; they know them by name and often go above and beyond their formal roles to assist. However, they are encountering increased safety risks and need additional protection in some situations such as stab-proof vests. Officers are aware of the risk of heightening trauma and anxiety for some people if their attire and equipment has an overtly enforcement appearance, therefore any additional protective gear would need to be unobtrusive.

Local Laws officers also require additional equipment to allow them to respond to the dynamic situations they face without having to wait for other departments to attend. This might include essential equipment for emergency situations and site management, including temporary fencing, pressure cleaning equipment, and access control measures.

Recommendations

32. Review the need to equip CoPP Local Laws officers with protective gear (such as stab-proof vests) due to increased safety risks encountered.

THE ROLE OF STATE GOVERNMENT

There is an important role for state government. As the Mayor said in her February statement the Victorian Government can help the CoPP on a number of important public safety measures. There is clearly a history of advocacy to state governments on these issues, but it is not necessary to set out that background. The issues listed by the mayor are:

- “Continue to assist with the three year City Street Health outreach service in St Kilda.” According to the Mayor’s statement this “includes a trial for Victoria’s first overdose prevention and response helpline;”
- “Provide additional Police resources, including dedicated, rostered neighbourhood policing for weekly joint patrols with Council’s Local Laws Officers;”
- “Engage PTV PSOs to patrol tram stops, particularly in areas like Acland and Fitzroy streets;”
- “Provide funding to upgrade and expand public place CCTV and mobile CCTV trailers”<sup>27</sup>.

These proposals/requests go directly to public safety and amenity. With one qualification, I support and adopt them as recommendations of this report. The qualification is that in relation to the second point, my recommendation is that “dedicated, rostered neighbourhood policing” take place daily not just weekly – although weekly would be a good start, if consistent.

In relation to the Health Outreach Service, I note the media statement of the Victorian Minister for Mental Health on 5 September 2024 announcing an expansion of the “Street Outreach Services to Reduce Drug Harm”<sup>28</sup>. The statement says that these mobile services will be “staffed by a multi-disciplinary health team”, that the St Kilda service would commence on 31 October, that it would be delivered by the Salvation Army and operate 7 days per week. I understand that this service is now operating. It is obviously complementary to the existing suite of services operating in the CoPP and those currently being delivered by Access Health/ Salvation Army. It can contribute to mitigation of health risks to drug users through the provision of wraparound health services; and can contribute to mitigating the actual and perceived risk to the safety of members of the community caused by the behaviour (some of it threatening and dangerous) of some drug users.

Introduction

Background

Community safety refers to when all sections or groups in an area feel comfortable and secure in their environment, where they can live, work, and travel freely. This can be achieved through policies, programs and actions by multiple stakeholders, including government, police and individuals.

The purpose of the Community Safety Roundtable is to:

- Review best-practice community outreach models from other jurisdictions and explore opportunities to strengthen community safety in the City of Port Phillip.
- Examine the role of local laws in protecting public spaces and consider police protocols and operations - such as those implemented by City of Melbourne - and their relevance to Port Phillip.
- Assess the feasibility of establishing an ongoing alliance to continue this work over the next four years.
- Provide short- and long-term recommendations to the Council to improve safety and public amenity.

This document seeks to provide Community Safety Roundtable participants with an overview of the following prior to the Round Table session in March 2025:

- City of Port Phillip current activity and practice.
- Benchmarking of selected Victorian councils.
- Community safety best practice models from around the world.

Port Phillip at a Glance

Port Phillip is located between 2 and 8km from the Melbourne CBD and covers an area of 21km<sup>2</sup>.

Port Phillip is home to people from over 163 birthplaces, with our residents speaking 114 different languages. While there is no typical resident, about three in five are aged 18 to 49 years. It is likely our community will continue to feature many people aged 18 to 49 years; however, the largest growth is expected to be in those aged over 60, suggesting many residents will retire and age within our community.

91% of the estimated 109,515<sup>1</sup> people live in medium to high density housing. Forty-one per cent of households belong to singles and 44% of residents in Port Phillip are renting. There is a housing crisis across Australia and Council has advocated to State and Federal governments to address this.

On any given night, around 25 people sleep rough on the streets, parks or foreshore in Port Phillip. There are many more sleeping on someone's couch, in their cars, in crisis accommodation, rooming houses or overcrowded dwellings.

Causes of homelessness are many and varied. Family violence, a critical shortage of affordable housing, unemployment, mental illness, family breakdown and drug and alcohol abuse all contribute to the level of homelessness in Australia.

Safety and security are important determinants of people's health and wellbeing. Overall, Port Phillip residents have a sense of safety and security that is comparable with the Victorian average. However, criminal incidents are persistently more common in Port Phillip than Victoria overall.

The rates of criminal incidents in Port Phillip have been consistently higher than the Victorian average over the past ten years. In the year ending in September 2024, the criminal incident rate per 100,000 population in Port Phillip was 9,596, an increase of 11.4% compared to the previous year. The Victorian average was 6,196.

Port Phillip's incidence of family violence has been below the Victorian average since 2018. While rates in Port Phillip increased in 2021 and 2022; they have decreased across 2023 and 2024. In the year ending in September 2024, the family violence incident rate per 100,000 population in Port Phillip was 1,270, compared with the Victorian average of 1,465.<sup>2</sup>

In 2021, alcohol and other drug consumption accounted for 22.6 hospitalisations per 1,000 residents in Port Phillip – compared with the Victorian average of 8.7.<sup>3</sup>

In 2020/21, the rate of alleged drug offences recorded by police was 50% higher than the Victorian rate and the 9th highest in the State.

In 2020/21, Victoria Police recorded 2.2 alcohol-related incidents of family violence, per 1,000 population – 71% higher than the corresponding Victorian rate and the 19th highest level in the State.

The forecasted population growth in Port Phillip by more than 60,000 residents by 2041 is expected to have implications for social disadvantage, rough sleeping, and crime. Addressing these challenges will require a coordinated effort from local authorities, community organisations, and residents to create a safe, inclusive, and supportive environment for all.

City of Port Phillip – What We Currently Do

Summary

Community safety is a part of all aspects of our lives and is essential to health and wellbeing. It includes:

- increasing community wellbeing and cohesion, and social and cultural inclusion,
- increasing opportunities for social and physical activity,
- improving public amenities,
- preventing and reducing hardship and insecure housing,
- preventing and reducing incidents of crime and anti-social behaviour.

We know that community safety requires a partnership approach. This is why we work collaboratively with our communities, support and service organisations, Victoria Police and State Government. We play a role in:

- fostering diversity, inclusion and social connection,
- activating public spaces through community grants and funding,
- providing supports for those experiencing hardship and insecure housing,
- maintaining and upgrading public amenities and addressing identified traffic blackspot issues,
- fostering strong partnerships with police and other emergency services, local traders and community groups,
- activating and revitalising our high streets,
- developing regulations to promote and maintain safety,
- maintaining safe public spaces through CCTV, Local Laws and joint patrols with Police and partnerships with service providers.

The City of Port Phillip shares our community's concern about safety and stands with the community in our expectation and commitment to Port Phillip as being a safe, liveable and vibrant place to live, work and visit.

We are actively working to consider joint solutions to community safety issues acknowledging the issues are complex and not in the remit of any one party to resolve.

This year we are commencing development of a new Community Safety Plan including extensive community consultation throughout 2025, seeking meaningful and lasting progress.

The Community Safety Plan is the umbrella under which Council's safety-focussed programs, activities and projects sit. Engagement on the plan will provide us with qualitative and quantitative understanding of where people feel and experience safe and unsafe spaces in the municipality, and the current sense of community resilience and social cohesion.

Health and Wellbeing

We have a legislated responsibility under the Public Health and Wellbeing Act 2008 (Victoria) to prepare a Municipal Public Health and Wellbeing Plan every four years.

To recognise the important role Council plays in supporting health and wellbeing across all our activities, we have integrated the planning, implementation and evaluation requirements of Municipal Public Health and Wellbeing Plan into the Council Plan 2021-31.

This means we are working to protect, improve and promote public health and wellbeing in everything we do.

See Appendix D for a list of services identified in the City of Port Phillip currently in the City of Port Phillip working in the areas of community support services and social infrastructure (2024).

Community Safety Plan

Community safety is a priority for the City of Port Phillip. It influences our physical health and wellbeing by altering how people use, and interact with the built environment, local amenities, parks and community facilities. A safe city contributes to positive social and economic outcomes for our community.

The Community Safety Plan details the City of Port Phillip's contribution to making our community a safe and resilient place to live, work and visit. It highlights three key priority areas of focus, foundational to the Action Plan.

Priority 1: Creating Safe Spaces

Priority 2: Building Resilience

Priority 3: Healthy Living

The Plan also aligns with a range of state and national strategies that relate to crime prevention, family violence, reducing harm from alcohol and drugs, emergency response and community safety.

Delivery of some Community Safety Plan actions has been delayed due to the impacts of COVID19, including lockdowns, service closures and the diversion of Council resources to support the emergency response. Despite this unexpected extra demand on our resources, we have managed to achieve many actions in the Community Safety Plan since its inception in 2019. These include:

- Maintaining our public place CCTV network and purchasing a mobile CCTV trailer.
- A comprehensive Local Laws review in 2023.
- The Renew Fitzroy Street, Acland Street and Carlisle Street vacant shopfront projects to help revitalise these high streets.
- Substantial financial contribution to the Wellington Street Common Ground Project to support people with complex needs who have been sleeping rough.
- Helping provide housing for those who need it most through our sponsorship housing program and connecting vulnerable members of our community to services.
- Partnering with Victoria Police and advocating for community safety needs.
- Ongoing support of Port Phillip Zero
- Increase in Local Laws officer shifts
- Installation of graffiti deterring murals bringing colour and vibrancy to our streets.
- Activation of public spaces through performances and community grants and funding.

On 2 August 2023, Council extended the Community Safety Plan and updated the action plan to set priorities and initiatives to November 2025. Review of the Community Safety Plan is currently underway and will include outcomes from this Roundtable and further community consultation.

Local Laws and Regulatory Framework

Council's Local Laws outline what is and isn't allowed on Council land, roads and streets. These Laws are developed under The Local Government Act 1989 (Victoria) to manage a range of community issues.

Our activities to manage and protect the safety and amenity of our community, including protection of amenity and Council land and how this is enforced are outlined in the Community Amenity Local Law 2023.

Please see Appendix A: Regulatory Framework Considerations.

Council Notice of Motion 19 February 2025

At the 19 February 2025 Council meeting, a Notice of Motion was passed requesting officers investigate changes to the current Local Law, and provide a report back to Council by May 2025, with a particular focus on:

- Clause 17 – Behaviour on Council Land and Roads.
- Clause 42 – Camping on Council Land
- Clause 43 – Furniture and Other Items on Council Land and Roads.

see Appendix B: City of Port Phillip Notice of Motion 19 February 2025.

Local Laws Officers

Council's Local Laws officers are authorised to issue warnings, Notices to Comply and infringement notices to people and organisations who breach the Local Law. They may impound items, goods, or equipment in relation to a breach. They do not have the legal power to move people on or respond to criminal behaviour. Police, not Local Laws officers, have the training, equipment and authority to respond to these issues.

Our officers are out seven days a week, undertaking daily patrols and working with Victoria Police around hot spots.

Joint Patrols

Our Local Laws officers work collaboratively with Victoria Police members from South Melbourne and St Kilda Stations to patrol on foot together along key high streets in the City.

These patrols are an opportunity to share information about issues on the streets, and for traders and residents to ask questions of our local Victoria Police and Local Laws Officers. Joint patrols are dependent on police resourcing. We continue to advocate for extra police resources for these patrols to be held regularly.

Rapid Response

Our Rapid Response team patrol key areas of the City daily to clean the streets and support people sleeping rough.

Additionally, Council has recently increased overnight street sweeping and pressure washing of Fitzroy and Acland Streets.

What is the Role of Victoria Police?

Police are responsible for public safety, law enforcement and crime prevention. It is their responsibility to:

- Respond to calls for assistance for personal and public safety, emergencies, and serious incidents.
- Work to prevent crime through a range of proactive community safety programs.
- Detect and investigates offences and brings to justice those responsible for committing them.
- Provide a visible presence within the community and at major events.

In January 2025, Council wrote to the Chief Commissioner of Police to seek advice on potential Local Law amendments to address community safety issues; and formally requested additional resources and joint patrols.

For more information about Victoria Police, visit <https://www.police.vic.gov.au/>

Recent Changes to Legislation

Recent changes to Victorian legislation and initiatives to achieve better public health and human rights outcomes that have changed policing practice and responses, include:

Sex Work Decriminalisation Act 2022

Summary Offences Amendment \(Decriminalisation of Public Drunkenness\) Act 2021 which has led to new public intoxication response services

Bail law amendments 2023

CCTV

CCTV is a crime prevention tool that assists with incident response, and crime management surveillance. We have CCTV cameras in four precincts in St Kilda. It is one tool we use to keep the community safe and prevent crime. There is also a rapid deployment CCTV trailer that is used by Victoria Police at different locations across Port Phillip.

Council is responsible for the infrastructure associated with the system. Victoria Police are responsible for the day-to-day operation of the cameras and monitoring of the network. Victoria Police own all footage.

CCTV camera locations:

- Fitzroy Street, St Kilda
- Little Grey and Grey Streets, St Kilda
- The St Kilda Foreshore
- The Acland Street, St Kilda Entertainment Precinct

As part of the 2024/25 budget process, Council made provision of $800K over the next three years to renew the current network as part of planned maintenance. In 2022 Council purchased a mobile CCTV trailer which is used by Victoria Police under the terms of a loan agreement

For further information, please see the Public Place Closed Circuit Television \(CCTV\) Policy.

Public Place Design and Activation

Community ownership of public space sends positive signals to the broader community. Places that feel owned and cared for are likely to be used, enjoyed, and revisited. Research shows that woman and gender diverse people can experience safety and perceptions of safety differently. Our approach to community safety needs to address these different experiences to ensure equitable access to public spaces.

Spaces that are inviting and appealing, have good lighting, clear lines of sight, and a sense of ownership by the community can help people to feel safe, and prevent crime. All space, even if well planned and well-designed, need to be effectively used and maintained to maximise community safety. Conversely, places that are infrequently used are commonly abused.

Public places can be designed to discourage criminal activity by ensuring there is more chance for offenders to be seen, challenged, or caught; reducing opportunities for criminal activity; and creating a need for more effort to commit a crime, with limited rewards. This approach is referred to as Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED).

Aspects such as poor lighting, amenity, visibility, and wayfinding, and limited natural surveillance may present greater opportunities for crimes to occur. The City of Port Phillip applies strategies to improve perceptions of safety and reduce the likelihood of crime, for broad community benefit.

The ongoing maintenance, cleansing and removal of graffiti and waste from our City contributes to enhancing actual and perceived safety for members of the public. Our work includes upgrading our infrastructure such as bike corridors, footpaths, parks, and signage. We also have a focus on improving and maintaining a high standard of lighting across the city.

Council has a program of street activation, festivals and events, and supported community activities and link to the City of Port Phillip Events Strategy, Outdoor Events Policy, Great Places and Precincts initiative and the Creative and Prosperous City Strategy, and Public Space Strategy.

Family and Gender Based Violence

National, State and local governments across Victoria have established family violence as a key priority for action. Council has a legislated obligation to prevent family violence and respond to the needs of victim survivors and includes this in our Council Plan. Council will:

- Take action to advance gender equality across the organisation and in the community, including through our Gender Equality Action Plan 2022 to 2025.
- Ensure that all staff employed in health and human service delivery have undertaken professional development in risk assessment for family violence.
- Ensure that the development of Council policies, programs and services consider the specific impacts of gender inequality on health, wellbeing and safety.
- Seek to provide safe and gender-equitable facilities and public environments.
- Play a leadership role in collaborating and co-ordinating initiatives tailored to the local community that focus on public education and community development.
- Participate in the Southern Metropolitan Region's Promoting Respect and Equity Together (PRET) Strategy group led by Women's Health in the South-East (WHISE), including working with community health and NGO partners.
- Develop an organisational Family Violence policy to support staff experiencing family violence.

City of Port Phillip has a Family Support Team where families can receive support and advice on topics such as family violence.

Alcohol and Other Drugs

Part of our approach to reducing alcohol-related harm includes controls on public consumption through our Local Laws. This includes alcohol and glass bans at certain times of the year and in certain places.

We support the safe disposal of drug litter through daily cleaning programs and syringe disposal collection.

We also work with partners to minimise harm through awareness raising campaigns and local engagement activities.

Housing and Homelessness

We take a human rights approach to people sleeping rough and managing public space. This means working in a coordinated way to ensure the rights and interests of vulnerable people, who are sleeping rough, are also met.

Increasing Access to Affordable Housing

Affordable housing is an important element of our strategy to help those experiencing housing stress and who have no home. In our Backyard: Growing Affordable Housing in Port Phillip 2015-2025 is Council's affordable housing strategy.

There may be potential future issues related to changes in the housing space within the City of Port Phillip, especially if the state government's housing program includes significant demolition and redevelopment projects. Some key aspects to consider:

- Pipeline Impacts: How planned demolitions and rebuilds may affect the housing supply, affordability, and availability in the area.
- Displacement Concerns: Whether temporary or permanent displacement of residents will be a factor, and what mitigation strategies might be in place.
- Infrastructure & Services: Potential strain or upgrades needed in transport, utilities, and community services due to redevelopment.
- Market & Investment Effects: Changes in property values, rental market shifts, and investor sentiment.

Council continues to advocate for an increase in affordable and community housing stock.

Housing and Homelessness Support

Council's Think and Act: Homelessness Action Strategy 2015 – 2020 is Council's specific homelessness strategy.

Through the Homelessness Action Strategy, we have worked with over 1,300 people aged over 50 to assist them to apply for a range of housing and support. We've also directly assisted over 300 people aged 50 plus to move into social housing locally (most through Council's sponsorship nomination into older persons public housing). Over half of these people were long term local residents on very low incomes, mainly receiving Centrelink Job Seeker benefits, who were losing their private housing.

Supporting People Sleeping Rough

Port Phillip Zero is a partnership between Council, local organisations and the community. We work together to manage amenity of sites and find opportunities to create new housing and reduce rough sleeping.

The goal is to end rough sleeping homelessness in the City of Port Phillip by providing appropriate, secure, affordable long-term housing, and support, to all people who are living without a home. This uses a 'housing first' approach that places people experiencing homelessness directly into permanent and safe housing with 'wrap around' support services to address complex needs such as mental health and alcohol and drug support.

The By Name List is an up-to-date list of everyone we know to be sleeping rough, in their cars or in abandoned buildings (known as squats). The objective of this approach is that we know everyone by name, learn their support and housing requirements and address complex needs.

Between February 2022 to February 2024, the Port Phillip Zero achieved a 40% decrease in rough sleeping in the City of Port Phillip.

Recently, people who have access to housing but are sleeping rough due to barriers in access have been included on the By Name List.

Local organisations involved include Council, Victoria Police, Housing First, Alfred Health, First Step, Launch Housing, Sacred Heart Mission, Salvation Army, Better Health Network, Housing First, St Kilda Community Housing, Port Phillip Community Group, Tenants Victoria, Uniting Care, Wintringham, Ngwala Willumbong, Southside Justice and Southport Community Housing.

For recent statistics see the Social and Amenity Management reports on Council's community safety webpage

Housing needs analysis from December 2024 identified the following requirements for people on the By Name List:

- DFFH housing
- Permanent Supported Housing
- Community Housing
- Support for Transition
- Support for Long Term Housing

Trauma Aware Port Phillip

Trauma Aware Port Phillip (TAPP) is a community-led, evidence-informed project to strengthen resilience and reduce the impact of trauma and shame in the Port Phillip community.

The TAPP Working Group is a network of individuals, organisations and service providers in the Port Phillip local government area who are collaborating to empower sectors and community to enhance connection and capacity, reduce trauma and shame in everyday interactions, build inclusion, and share knowledge. Through this work the aim is improve community health and wellbeing, increase social cohesion and resilience, support local services sectors, and build sustainable positive change.

Community Funding and Service Agreements

Community grants programs and funding agreements support eligible community groups and organisations to apply for funding for projects and programs that: strengthen capacity, encourage social connection, address health and well-being inequities, enable access and inclusion for diverse communities, and support sustainability initiatives.

Please also see Council's Community Funding Policy.

Service Agreements

Council has service agreements in place with a number of service providers to support volunteers, information and referral services, food relief and support, legal services, and assertive outreach and support work.

Other Research / Best Practice Models

Below is some of the literature and research available relating to the topics being addressed at the Roundtable. It is by no means exhaustive and serves as a sample of responses to common issues

Regulatory Lens / Harm Minimisation

Victoria Police Community Sentiment Survey

The third annual Victoria Police Community Sentiment Survey was conducted state-wide over a four-week period, from 1 May 2024 to 31 May 2024.

Victorians were asked to share their local safety concerns and how comfortable they feel about approaching Police and Protective Services Officers outside of an emergency.

Over 13,000 responses were received from the 2024 Community Sentiment Survey, helping police identify issues that matter most to Victorians.

Victorian residents noted their top five safety concerns as:

2024

- Safety in public places
- Safety of my property and possessions
- Drugs and alcohol
- Road safety
- Serious and organised crime

2023

- Safety in public places
- Safety of my property and possessions
- Road safety
- Drugs and alcohol
- Cybercrime or online safety

Respondents were given an opportunity to share their ideas on how to make them feel safer. The most frequently noted comments were 'increased police presence' and 'more patrols', followed by 'improving community environments' e.g., better lighting on streets/more CCTV.

Alternative First Responders – National Justice Project

The "Alternative First Responders Position Paper" (February 2025) by the National Justice Project (NJP) advocates for replacing police as primary responders in situations requiring health and social care interventions. The paper critiques the reliance on police for non-criminal incidents, emphasizing the harm caused—particularly to marginalized communities, including First Nations people, those experiencing mental health crises, and individuals facing homelessness.

Key points include:

1. The Need for Alternative Responders
  - Police are frequently involved in situations that require de-escalation, medical expertise, or social services, often resulting in excessive force, criminalization, and harm.
  - Police interactions disproportionately affect marginalized communities, exacerbating issues like systemic racism and discrimination.
2. Guiding Principles for Alternative Models

- Community-led response programs should be trauma-informed, culturally appropriate, and prioritizing de-escalation over enforcement.
- Responder teams should include individuals with lived experience and reflect the diversity of the communities they serve.

3. Successful Alternative Models

- Examples from Australia and internationally demonstrate effective non-police first responder programs, such as:
  - Murri Watch (Queensland, Australia) – A First Nations community patrol program.
  - Urgent Mental Health Care Centre (South Australia) – A peer-led crisis intervention service.
  - CAHOOTS (Oregon, USA) – A model that diverts emergency calls to mental health and crisis workers instead of police.

4. Policy Recommendations

- Governments should reallocate resources from policing to community-based crisis response services.
- Emergency call diversion programs should be expanded.
- Justice reinvestment strategies should focus on health and social care rather than criminalization.

The paper argues that alternative first response models can improve public safety, reduce harm, and provide more effective care for vulnerable populations while decreasing unnecessary and harmful police interactions.

Violence Reduction Units at a Crossroads – A Positive Future

This report, authored by Professor Niven Rennie, examines the current state of Violence Reduction Units (VRUs) in the UK and proposes a future direction that emphasizes prevention over punitive responses. It critiques the historical "tough on crime" approach, arguing that addressing the root causes of violence—poverty, lack of youth services, and social inequality—would be more effective and financially sustainable in the long term.

Key Themes and Findings

1. Challenges of Crime-Focused Approaches

- Since the 1990s, crime policies in the UK have been reactive and punitive, often prioritizing imprisonment over preventative social measures.
- This "crisis response" model is not only ineffective but also costly, as it diverts funds away from early interventions.

2. The Rising Cost of Crisis Responses

- Youth homelessness, school exclusions, and youth justice system involvement are increasing.
- A lack of youth services has resulted in higher costs for alternative provisions like pupil referral units and young offender institutions.
- The annual cost of youth homelessness in the UK is estimated at £8.5 billion, while placing a young person in custody can cost up to £300,000 per year.

3. The Importance of Prevention

- Investing in prevention programs can reduce long-term costs while improving youth outcomes.
- A public health approach to violence reduction—focusing on early intervention and social support—has proven successful in areas where VRUs have been implemented.

4. Key Components of a Preventative Approach

- Safe Spaces: Youth hubs, community centres, and informal gathering places (e.g., McDonald's, libraries) can serve as safe spaces for young people.
- Trusted Adults: Mentorship from reliable adults plays a crucial role in youth support and crime prevention.
- Community-Led Initiatives: Programs tailored to specific community needs, such as the Brighton Streets Project and Lancashire Youth Champions, have demonstrated success in reducing youth violence.

5. Proposed Structural Changes

- The report suggests expanding VRUs into Prevention Partnerships, which would take a broader role in youth welfare and crime prevention.
- These partnerships could integrate with existing initiatives, such as the Labour government's proposed Young Futures Programme, to provide holistic support to young people.
- Alternative funding sources, including private sector and philanthropic contributions, should be explored to reduce reliance on public sector finances.

The report advocates for a shift in focus from punishment to prevention, arguing that early intervention, youth support, and community engagement are more effective in reducing violence. By restructuring VRUs into broader prevention-focused bodies and securing sustainable funding sources, the UK could create a long-term strategy for reducing youth crime and supporting at-risk individuals.

Impact of a Police Crackdown on a Street Drug Scene

This study examines the effects of Operation Clean Heart, a police crackdown on a street heroin market in Footscray, a suburb of Melbourne, Australia. The research is based on qualitative data from individuals involved in the drug market and harm reduction services.

Key Findings:

- Temporary and Superficial Impact: While the crackdown reduced the visible presence of the drug scene, the market quickly adapted, making the effects short-lived.
- Displacement of Drug Activity: Rather than eliminating the drug trade, the operation pushed it to nearby areas, increasing risks for users and communities.
- Negative Public Health Consequences: The increased police presence led to:
  - Riskier injecting behaviors (e.g., hurried use, reluctance to carry clean needles).
  - Unsafe disposal of needles and syringes.
  - Reduced access to harm reduction services.
- Increased Violence and Crime: The crackdown led to greater volatility, fraud, and violence within the drug scene.

- Strained Police-Community Relations: Frequent searches, surveillance, and intimidation tactics worsened relations between law enforcement and affected communities.

The study argues that police crackdowns are ineffective in addressing illicit drug problems and can have harmful unintended consequences. Instead, a balanced approach incorporating supply reduction, demand reduction, and harm reduction, as outlined in Australia's National Drug Strategic Framework, is recommended.

Safe Spaces – Understanding and Enhancing Safety and Inclusion for Diverse Women

This 2023 research report focuses on enhancing safety and inclusion for diverse women in public spaces. Conducted in partnership with Victorian councils, universities and community organisations, the study aimed to identify barriers to safety and develop co-designed solutions.

Key Themes and Findings:

1. Perennial Safety Issues: The study identified recurring safety concerns such as poor lighting, lack of surveillance, and antisocial behaviour, particularly at night. Women reported feeling unsafe in certain public spaces, with a focus on racism, discrimination, and the behaviour of men and young people.
2. Co-Designing Safe Spaces: Through engagement strategies like focus groups, interviews, and a co-design workshop, women collaborated with local councils and researchers to develop practical interventions. The study emphasized that women's safety must be considered through an intersectional lens, acknowledging different experiences based on age, ability, and cultural background.
3. Planning for 24-Hour Safety: The research found that women's safety concerns varied based on time of day, with heightened fears at night. Participants proposed improved lighting, security, and activation of spaces through community programs to enhance safety.
4. Safety Through Connection: The study highlighted that inclusion and a sense of belonging contribute to perceptions of safety. Women felt safer in environments where they saw diverse representation and community activities.

Recommendations:

- Integrating gender-sensitive urban planning strategies.
- Strengthening local government partnerships with women's organizations.
- Using co-design approaches for inclusive and culturally relevant safety interventions.

Overall, the report underscores the importance of inclusive urban design and community-driven solutions in making public spaces safer for diverse women.

Co-Designing Out Crime

The document Co-designing Out Crime by Olga Camacho Duarte, Rohan Lulham, and Lucy Kaldor explores how collaborative design can be used to prevent crime. It focuses on the Winter School program at the Designing Out Crime (DOC) research centre at the University of Technology

Sydney (UTS), where students, academics, and external stakeholders work together to develop crime prevention strategies.

Key Points:

- Co-Design vs. Traditional Crime Prevention: The paper critiques Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design (CPTED) as too rigid and prescriptive, arguing that a co-design approach fosters creativity and innovation.
- Winter School Program: A four-week design course where students, in collaboration with partner organizations (such as government agencies and businesses), work on real-world crime issues.
- Reframing Crime Problems: Instead of merely addressing symptoms, the program encourages students to redefine crime-related challenges, leading to holistic, user-centered solutions.
- Case Studies: The paper presents three case studies:
  - Improving passenger safety at a railway station.
  - Enhancing community engagement in a social housing estate.
  - Managing alcohol-related violence in an urban nightlife area.
- Challenges and Benefits: While the co-design approach provides fresh perspectives and strengthens partnerships, challenges include managing diverse stakeholders, ensuring implementation, and dealing with time constraints.

The paper argues that co-design offers a more dynamic, socially responsive way to prevent crime. It promotes the idea that engaging communities, designers, and organizations in a collaborative process leads to more effective and sustainable crime prevention solutions.

Want to Fight Crime? Plant Some Flowers with Your Neighbour

The article "Want to Fight Crime? Plant Some Flowers with Your Neighbour" explores how improving neighbourhood social connections can help reduce crime.

It highlights research at the University of Michigan, showing that when neighbours engage in small community activities—such as planting flowers or maintaining shared spaces—they build trust and a sense of responsibility for their surroundings. This increased social cohesion leads to more informal surveillance (more "eyes on the street"), which can deter criminal activity.

The article connects this idea to crime prevention through environmental design (CPTED) and the broken windows theory, emphasizing that well-kept spaces signal community care and discourage disorder. Ultimately, the message is that small, collective actions can make neighbourhoods safer.

Housing and Homelessness

Everybody's Business: What Local Government Can Do to End Homelessness

The report, Everybody's Business: What Local Government Can Do to End Homelessness by Leanne Mitchell, explores the role of local councils in addressing homelessness, particularly rough sleeping. It is based on the author's 2019 Churchill Fellowship research, where she travelled to the UK, US, and Canada to study local government responses.

Key Themes and Findings:

- Challenges Faced by Local Governments: Councils often lack a clear mandate, sufficient funding, and coordinated strategies to tackle homelessness effectively. Despite this, they are at the forefront of the response due to their direct engagement with communities.

- Best Practices and Guidelines for Councils: The report presents structured recommendations across four key areas:
  1. Understanding the local homelessness situation – Collecting data, listening to communities, and establishing a shared definition.
  2. Leading collaboration and shaping the narrative – Engaging partners, using lived experience perspectives, and educating communities.
  3. Organising council strategies and workforce – Developing strategies, structuring teams, involving leadership, and securing funding.
  4. Taking action to prevent and end homelessness – Influencing housing supply, focusing on prevention, leveraging community spaces like libraries, and improving crisis response.
- Case Studies: The report features international examples of successful initiatives, such as Manchester's collaborative approach, San Francisco's Public Library engagement, and Halifax's response to encampments.
- Policy Recommendations: The report advocates for a stronger role for local councils in national homelessness strategies, better funding mechanisms, and cross-sector collaboration.

The report emphasizes that homelessness is a shared responsibility and that local governments, despite their limitations, can play a crucial role by fostering partnerships, advocating for policy change, and implementing innovative responses.

“This is My Community”: Reproducing and Resisting Boundaries of Exclusion in Contested Public Spaces

This U.S. 2015 study by Toolis and Hammack explores how people perceive boundaries of public spaces and how they engage and participate within them. The article explores inclusion and exclusion mediated through public spaces and determined by relationships to power. The study provides context for theories of inclusion and exclusion which support our understanding of social cohesion and community connectedness. The research setting was the Santa Cruz downtown area which has some parallels to St Kilda as both are resident and tourist destinations and receive high media attention on crime and safety. Santa Cruz is also a city with a progressive reputation, and which has harsh anti-homeless local laws.

Key finding:

- Laws that target low income and unhoused people by prohibiting non-criminal activities such as sitting, sleeping, and standing may only serve to stigmatise and exacerbate community tensions regarding economic development and inequality.
- Addressing the structural roots of inequality such as availability of affordable housing and secure employment opportunities are better placed to address community welfare,

Cash up front: Can no-strings payments help solve homelessness?

A study published in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences investigated the effects of a one-time, unconditional cash transfer of CAD$7,500 to individuals experiencing homelessness in Vancouver, British Columbia. The randomized controlled trial included 50 participants who received the cash transfer and 65 control participants who did not. Results indicated that recipients moved into stable housing faster and spent fewer days homeless over the following year compared to the control group. Additionally, the cash transfer led to net societal savings, primarily by reducing shelter use.

The study also explored public perceptions regarding cash transfers to homeless individuals. It found that many people harbor mistrust about how homeless individuals would spend such funds, often assuming they would misuse the money. However, the study's findings challenge these stereotypes, demonstrating that recipients used the cash to improve their housing situations without increasing spending on temptation goods.

These findings contribute to the growing body of evidence supporting cash transfers as a viable intervention for reducing homelessness and highlight the importance of addressing public

Social Cohesion

Mapping Social Cohesion

The 2024 Mapping Social Cohesion Report by the Scanlon Foundation Research Institute provides an in-depth analysis of social attitudes in Australia, focusing on key factors affecting national unity and inclusion.

Key Findings:

- Economic Pressures: Rising living costs and housing challenges are affecting Australians' sense of security and cohesion.
- Immigration & Diversity: Attitudes toward multiculturalism remain mostly positive, but concerns about immigration levels persist.
- Trust in Institutions: Confidence in government and public institutions has fluctuated, reflecting broader political and social trends.
- Community Strength: Local communities play a crucial role in maintaining wellbeing and social harmony.
- Emerging Challenges: Global conflicts, misinformation, and political divides are influencing national cohesion.

While Australians generally support diversity and social inclusion, economic strains and global tensions are testing the resilience of social cohesion. The report emphasizes the need for policies that promote stability, trust, and inclusive community engagement.

Social Cohesion and Pro-Social Responses to Perceptions of Crime

The study aims to explore how perceptions of crime influence community behaviours and whether social cohesion plays a role in shaping pro-social responses (e.g., engagement in crime prevention, neighbourhood watch, and social support).

Key Findings

- High Social Cohesion Encourages Positive Responses:
  - Individuals in tightly-knit communities are more likely to respond to crime concerns with proactive and collective measures.
  - They engage in activities such as neighbourhood watch programs, supporting victims, and advocating for policy changes.
- Fear-Based Reactions in Low Social Cohesion Areas:
  - In communities with weaker social ties, crime perceptions are more likely to lead to avoidance behaviours (e.g., staying indoors, distrust of neighbours) rather than collective action.
  - This suggests that a lack of cohesion exacerbates fear rather than fostering solutions.

- Crime Perceptions Do Not Always Match Reality:
  - Some individuals overestimate crime levels due to media exposure or personal biases, which can influence their willingness to engage in community efforts.

Implications

- Policy Recommendations: The study emphasizes the need for local governments and organizations to strengthen social bonds within communities as a means to enhance crime prevention and resilience.
- Community Engagement Strategies: Encouraging neighbourhood interactions, trust-building initiatives, and shared public spaces can foster stronger collective responses to crime.

The research highlights that social cohesion is a crucial factor in determining how communities respond to crime perceptions. Strong social networks lead to proactive, collective solutions, while weaker cohesion results in avoidance and fear-driven behaviours.

Adverse Childhood Experiences

When we talk of people who live rough, we need to understand some of the impact of child-and adult-hood trauma.

“Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) is a term used to describe very stressful events or circumstances that children may experience during their childhood. The term was introduced in a seminal 1998 US study on the impact of childhood abuse and neglect and household challenges on later-life health and wellbeing (n = 17,337) (Felitti et al., 1998). This early study showed an association between adverse experiences in childhood and potentially profound impacts on later health and social functioning.

The most widely recognised and researched ACEs relate to abuse, neglect and household adversities, and include:

- childhood physical, sexual and emotional abuse
- physical neglect and emotional neglect
- exposure to family violence
- parental substance use
- parental mental illness
- parental separation or divorce; and
- parental incarceration.

An estimated 72% of Australian children have been exposed to at least one ACE, with this rate being higher in some vulnerable Australian populations e.g. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders (Zubrick et al., 2005), juvenile offenders (Baglivio et al., 2014), and children involved in welfare services (Kerker et al., 2015).

A dose-response relationship [extent of exposure] is also observed with health risk behaviours and social functioning (Bellis et al., 2016; McGavock & Spratt, 2016). For example, adults who had been exposed to four or more ACEs as a child (i.e. who had an ACEs ‘score’ of four or more) were:

- 10.3 times more likely to have injected drugs
- 6 times more likely to have had or caused unintended teenage pregnancy
- 2.5 times more likely to contract sexually transmitted infections

- 15 times more likely to have committed violence against another person in the previous 12 months
- 20 times more likely to have been incarcerated during their lifetime
- 4.6 times more likely to suffer from depression
- 12.2 times more likely to have attempted suicide.

Exposure to ACEs can have intergenerational effects. Children who experience ACEs are more likely to have parents who experienced ACEs themselves (Allen & Donkin, 2015)."

Community Building / Resilience Programs

Knox Empowering Communities – Evaluation Report

The document is a project evaluation report for the Knox Empowering Communities initiative, conducted by Capiche Consulting for Knox City Council and the Victorian Department of Justice and Community Safety. It assesses the outcomes of a community-led program aimed at enhancing safety in Ferntree Gully through local engagement, partnerships, and targeted projects.

Key Highlights:

- Funding & Goals: The Victorian Government allocated $700,000 to Knox City Council under the Empowering Communities Grant to address crime and safety concerns through community-led initiatives.
- Community Consultation: Over 275 individuals participated in discussions to identify major safety concerns, including family violence, substance abuse, and public disorder.
- Action Group: A diverse local group was formed to oversee project implementation and funding distribution.
- Funded Initiatives: Six community projects were launched to build relationships, reduce isolation, and foster safety:
  1. Cultural Safety Program – Focused on First Nations youth and cultural inclusion.
  2. Ferntree Gully Village Markets – Designed to activate public spaces and promote local businesses.
  3. Community Safety Outreach – Support for vulnerable residents, particularly those experiencing homelessness.
  4. Neighbour Day – Strengthening social ties through local events.
  5. Knox Nocturnals Youth Group – Providing safe, inclusive spaces for youth.
  6. YES Program – Aiding youth engagement and social inclusion.
- Community Engagement & Impact:
  - Over 4,300 participants were engaged across projects.
  - Improved perceptions of safety in Ferntree Gully, particularly during evening hours.
  - Increased social connections and community pride.

- Fostered long-term collaborations between local organizations, law enforcement, and service providers.

Evaluation & Findings:

- Successes:
  - The community-led model effectively engaged local voices and needs.
  - The Action Group played a key role in ensuring inclusivity and program alignment.
  - Strong partnerships were developed between stakeholders, leading to potential sustainability of certain initiatives beyond the project period.
- Challenges:
  - Stakeholder participation varied, with some groups disengaging over time.
  - Sustainability concerns for certain projects, particularly those needing ongoing funding.
  - Evaluation data gaps for some initiatives, limiting the ability to measure full impact.

The Knox Empowering Communities project was successful in fostering community-led safety improvements, enhancing social cohesion, and activating public spaces. The initiative established sustainable community partnerships, though ongoing support and funding will be necessary to maintain long-term benefits.

Community Resilience and Crime Prevention: Applying the Community Engagement Theory to the Risk of Crime

The paper, "Community Resilience and Crime Prevention: Applying the Community Engagement Theory to the Risk of Crime," examines how the Community Engagement Theory—previously applied to natural disasters—can also be used to understand and enhance community participation in crime prevention.

Key Points:

1. Growing Role of Citizens in Crime Prevention
  - Governments increasingly expect citizens to take an active role in social safety.
  - Online neighbourhood watch groups (e.g., WhatsApp-based crime alert systems) have gained popularity as a community-driven approach to preventing crime.
2. Application of Community Engagement Theory
  - The study explores psychological drivers at three levels:
    - Individual level: Personal beliefs, emotions, moral values, self-efficacy.
    - Community level: Sense of belonging, collective efficacy, prior participation.
    - Institutional level: Trust in police, legitimacy of law enforcement, perceived empowerment.
3. Research Methodology
  - Conducted an online survey with 1,245 Dutch citizens who were part of municipal citizen panels.
  - The survey measured willingness to gather crime-related information and willingness to act in crime situations.
4. Key Findings

- Information gathering was primarily influenced by individual-level factors (e.g., risk perception, moral values, emotions).
- Willingness to act was influenced by all three levels (individual, community, and institutional).
- Community participation played a strong role in crime prevention; people who had participated in neighbourhood activities were more likely to intervene in crime situations.
- Trust in the police and perceived legitimacy had a marginal effect on reporting behaviour.

5. Implications & Recommendations

- Authorities should focus on individual-level factors (e.g., improving self-efficacy) when encouraging citizens to seek crime-related information.
- Community engagement efforts (e.g., organizing events, strengthening local networks) can enhance crime intervention.
- Caution is needed to avoid vigilantism, as increased citizen involvement in crime prevention may sometimes lead to unauthorized actions.

The Community Engagement Theory is applicable not just to natural hazards but also to human-made risks like crime. Encouraging citizen participation in crime prevention requires understanding psychological drivers at multiple levels. The study provides insights for policymakers on how to motivate reporting and intervention behaviours while maintaining lawfulness and community trust.

Appendix C: City of Port Phillip Notice of Motion 11 December 2024

14.1

NOTICE OF MOTION - COUNCILLOR BUCKINGHAM - COMMUNITY SAFETY

I, Councillor Libby Buckingham, give notice that I intend to move the Motion outlined below at the Ordinary Meeting of Council on 11 December 2024:

That Council:-

1. Reaffirms its commitment to a safe, liveable and just community.
2. Requests that City of Port Phillip initiate a round table of key stakeholders, incorporating the City of Port Phillip, health, housing, community legal and social service providers, Victoria Police and other relevant stakeholders or recognised expertise to examine the current situation and review place-based models to address community safety issues in our high streets and surrounding areas.
3. Requests that the round table:
  - a) Provide advice and case studies from other jurisdictions on community outreach models and consider opportunities to ensure best practice in the City of Port Phillip;
  - b) Provide advice and case studies from other Council jurisdictions on how local laws can be used to provide community safety and protect the amenity of public spaces within the City of Port Phillip. The advice is to include consideration of police protocols and operations with the City of Melbourne and their applicability to the City of Port Phillip;
  - c) Review the merit and feasibility of establishing an ongoing alliance to continue this work over the next four years.
  - d) Provide recommendations to Council on the above within the short and long-term.
4. Requests that the Mayor write to the Chief Commissioner of Victoria Police seeking advice and recommendations on local laws in the City of Port Phillip, and a proposal on how any changes to the local laws would be used and work in practice.
5. Notes that officers have commenced work on the update of the City of Port Phillip's Community Safety plan including opportunities for the public to share their lived experiences in relation to community safety and that Councillors will be updated on this regularly.

Supporting Information

1. Concerns have been raised by our community, including traders, about antisocial and illegal behaviour (including public drug and alcohol use, dealing, abuse and harassment of passers-by). Council receives many complaints about the issue, its impacts upon amenity, safety, perceptions of safety and the appeal of high streets and other areas as vibrant, attractive and safe places to visit.
2. In many cases those who are involved include people experiencing homelessness, mental health, addiction and other challenges. In response, Council has:
  - a) Invested and partnered with the State Government and St Kilda Community Housing in the Wellington Street Common Ground Project, to provide 26 self-contained units for people with complex needs who have been sleeping rough.
  - b) Invested in CCTV in Fitzroy Street to enable Police to monitor activity.

MEETING OF THE PORT PHILLIP CITY COUNCIL
11 DECEMBER 2024

- c) Purchased a mobile CCTV unit that Victoria Police move around the city to deter poor behaviour and to provide footage of specific problem areas.
- d) Funded cardboard collection for businesses on these streets.
- e) Introduced the 7 day a week Rapid Response crew to provide 'instant' response to incidents, spillages, waste and cleanliness problems.
- f) Introduced the 7 day a week City Amenity Officers' team to undertake daily patrols to identify and manage hotspot areas.
- g) Increased overnight street sweeping and pressure washing of both Fitzroy and Acland Streets.
- h) Advocated for additional Police resources to provide an increased presence, improved response times and for Police to accompany our Officers on joint patrols.
- i) Committed to community engagement on the review of Council's Community Safety Plan in 2025.
- j) Weekly meetings with social service agencies such as Better Health Network and Launch Housing to provide outreach and other services.

3. These issues are complex, and their resolution does not sit exclusively with the City of Port Phillip. Collaboration with police, health and other services are essential.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Submission to the City of Port Phillip Council on the Community Safety Round Table

Ngwala Willumbong has a long history and foundation in the City of Port Phillip. Ngwala was established, almost 50 years ago, in St Kilda to support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community members who were impacted by Alcohol misuse. We have grown to become the lead agency in Aboriginal Alcohol and Other Drugs (AOD) and Homelessness support in Victoria and have both the Public Intoxication Response and the Aboriginal Homelessness Entry Point programs based in St Kilda.

The root cause of Aboriginal homelessness is due to colonisation. Ongoing colonisation is realised through processes that result in increased homelessness, including over-incarceration, child removal, and housing discrimination. The issues we are addressing in these Community Safety Round Tables are direct evidence of this.

Ngwala provides services within the City of Port Phillip which are Aboriginal specific, outreach based and holistic. We specialise in both homelessness and Alcohol and Drug interventions with two of our rehabilitation facilities also located in St Kilda as well as our Sobering up centre that was established in response to the Public intoxication reform. In addition to this we run the only Aboriginal Homelessness Entry Point in Melbourne which is also based in St Kilda. Currently, our Entry Point is in a Pilot stage and funding lapses in July 2025. Further, our outreach case management services are underfunded and under resourced across both AOD and Homelessness. Most of the funding and resourcing sits with non-Aboriginal specific organisations.

Our reach as an organisation is directly linked to resourcing. We do not have the resourcing provided to non-Aboriginal organisations, yet we are over-represented in all data sets pertaining to Rough Sleeping and Justice interventions. We feel for and are gravely concerned about this particular cohort of our community who are left displaced due to a lack of services available to and targeting their specific needs.

Ngwala is committed to serving our community to meet their needs, reduce trauma and create wellness. When considering self-determined and culturally responsive outcomes and solutions for our community, we are acutely aware that demand outweighs our current ability to meet community needs. However, Ngwala's responsibility to our own community requires us to stretch resources and fill service gaps to ensure that the most vulnerable are not alone.

We appreciate the opportunity to represent our community, via this submission, to find solutions for our people who are displaced. We value our partnership with the Port Phillip Council in targeting these issues and providing Community specific and focused solutions.

We value our partners at CoPP who have embraced the issues we face as a community and have actively collaborated with us in addressing issues faced by Rough Sleepers, we look forward to extending this relationship to find further interventions and solutions.

Our solutions include caring for our vulnerable community members as well as addressing safety concerns of Port Phillip Residents. We propose that in addressing these issues we consider short-, medium- and longer-term planning and implementation.

Proposed considerations to address the needs of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander People

We propose the following interventions and resources to reduce and manage these issues:

1. Strengthening Ngwala's relationship with the Port Phillip City Council (PPCC). Our relationship with PPCC is currently one of collaboration when addressing Aboriginal community issues. This could be strengthened by formalising our partnership and increasing our presence on joint patrols and information sharing. Our partnership would continue to monitor and work collaboratively to meet issues as they arise together. Our current participation is impacted by resourcing which results in ad-hoc and reactive participation rather than consistent and proactive approaches. If we had a dedicated program to supporting this work, it would ensure consistency in addressing need. PPCC is a strong ally in addressing the issues of our community and has initiated and committed to furthering our work together. We welcome and look forward to extending our current partnership.
2. Introduce a partnership and network with Victoria Police in St Kilda. Port Phillip Police Station do not have a dedicated Aboriginal Community Liaison Officer (ACLO). We understand that Victoria Police are in the process of assigning a Police Aboriginal Liaison Officer (PALO) in Port Phillip however, given the escalation of issues and concerns for community safety, we feel that the addition of a Port Phillip specific ACLO could ensure that our organisations have forged sustainable partnerships, collaborative outcomes, shared support and provide safer interactions for our community members. This will not only improve the Cultural awareness and practices within Victoria Police but will also ensure that community can be diverted from compliance processes and receive the support they need.
3. Establishment of a Community Gathering Place. Our community gathers as a Cultural norm and practice. We do not accept that this is a problematic practice, rather we require a dedicated space where this can be supported. We propose that we can greatly decrease the number of people who are participating in anti-social behaviours by providing a drop-in Centre or gathering place. We propose a space where those experiencing street-based sleeping can find resources, amenities and support. All our community members who are rough sleeping are heavily impacted by trauma and mental health issues which render them vulnerable and unable to commit to tenancy agreements, shared living spaces or crisis/rooming house accommodation. This cohort is particularly at risk of premature and preventable deaths. A gathering place where food, amenities, information, support, acceptance and safety are available will incrementally increase individuals' wellness which can lead to seeking support for further interventions. For our community it would mean a welcoming place of belonging which is Culturally designed, led, responsive and trauma informed. This proposed Gathering place is the most imperative to reduce the number of Rough Sleepers and street-based gatherings. St Kilda has a long history of being a Gathering place for our people. Several places including Catani Gardens and more recently the Ngari Tree ensure our people can find one another, our services can find those in need, and we can continue to find strength in kinship ties. A gathering place is the most considerate option in targeting the issues we are discussing. It will ensure that people who are experiencing street-based living are supported and will also address the safety concerns of Port Phillip residents.

4. St Kilda Community Housing has proposed Culturally informed supported accommodation in addition to the Wellington Street Common Ground project. Ngwala is a partner agency in the Wellington Street Project, and we have a partnership with St Kilda Community Housing for several years to house our most vulnerable community members. Investment in supported housing collaborations with housing providers and services that are well informed and experienced in working with Rough Sleepers is imperative to reduce homelessness. The complexities and co-morbidities impacting Rough Sleeper cohorts require collaboration of multi-disciplinary teams specialising in the intersecting issues which cause homelessness. For our community, who have strong ties to the St Kilda area, tenancies such as Wellington Street Common Ground are crucial to ending Aboriginal homelessness, sustaining tenancies and reducing the risk of re-entry into homelessness. We support further investment into supported housing with a Culturally specific component of support.

5. Service sector and systemic changes are required to address the needs of Aboriginal people sleeping Rough. Dual diagnosis issues are prevalent within this cohort. The service sector does not invest in Aboriginal specific Mental Health services or Dual diagnosis services. Currently, the Homeless Outreach Psychiatric Services (HOPS) are grossly underfunded.

6. Aboriginal self-determination must be embedded throughout policy and program design. Currently our community must fit within a system which is not designed for our specific needs. We need holistic policy responses to the complex, multi-faceted and specific needs of our community to gain wellness. The Blueprint for an Aboriginal Specific Homelessness System should be supported and invested in for any real and systemic changes to occur.
7. Homelessness policy needs to change the eligibility criteria into homelessness programs for Rough Sleepers who have housing. Often our community members have tenancies which are located far from their kinship and community ties. Further, Rough Sleepers are often lacking the skills to sustain a tenancy and have no ongoing tenancy support. These community members are not eligible for support outside of Ngwala's services, due to having a tenancy. Ngwala provides services to this cohort, however, housing options are dependent on non-Aboriginal services. As we are all aware, there is a lack of public and social housing which further impacts the health of tenancies. People are often housed in areas which isolate them resulting in failed tenancies.
8. Housing First programs are designed to support Rough Sleepers throughout the housing continuum. Aboriginal specific Housing First workers would make a significant and positive impact on the cohort of community rough sleepers in PPCC. Ngwala will launch a new Housing First Program later this year which covers the Southern Bayside Peninsula region. Further investment into Housing First would be beneficial in reducing the numbers of people who are homeless in Port Phillip.
9. Ongoing support for the Functional Zero Program. Ngwala sits on the Zero network in Port Phillip. This program supports and monitors those who are rough sleeping and finds solutions for support. We propose that council continues to support this program to meet its goal of functional zero.
10. Support to continue funding for Ngwala's Aboriginal Homelessness Entry Point. The lapsing funding of our Entry Point will significantly impact and increase the numbers of unsupported homeless Aboriginal community members in the City of Port Phillip. We have support from the Federal and State Ministers, Government bodies including Homes Victoria, Community and partner organisations across the City of Port Phillip for continued funding.

Concerns for our Community

We hold grave concerns for our community if the amendment to local laws and new by laws are introduced, which will essentially criminalise homelessness. Criminalising or having public space protection orders does not solve homelessness. It drives people further from the help they need and increases the problems they face. In fact, it can make homelessness worse. Homelessness is a victimless act. The basis argument is that these laws criminalise poverty and disproportionately target vulnerable people, particularly Aboriginal people. In addition, these laws will be ineffective in addressing homelessness and instead public resources should be focused on providing support and services to those in need to deal with this community matter.

The proposed new laws by PPCC are a means of using the criminal justice system to punish people for being homeless or for engaging in activities that are a direct result of being homeless. In essence, the proposed by laws seek to prohibit sleeping in public spaces, even when there is no alternative shelter, and then punish them for their basic survival activities.

Aboriginal people will be disproportionately targeted and impacted by these proposed by laws. Reasons for this include the Cultural practice of gathering in community groups, which makes us more vulnerable to compliance measures, and escalation of behaviours which can lead to arrest and incarceration. Unconscious bias, racism and discrimination are issues that always impact our community particularly around compliance.

In reality, how will affected people know about the new laws? The reality is, they won't. If rough sleepers are unaware, it is manifestly unfair in preventing prior opportunity to avoid "unlawful behaviour". There are no preventative or alternative options for homeless people, namely as suitable, affordable and available housing.

Section 73(6) of the Local Government Act 2020 provides:

(6) If—

- (a) the Council proposes to alter a proposed local law in respect of which notice has been given under subsection (3); and
- (b) the alteration will affect the rights or responsibilities of any person—the Council must comply with subsections (2) to (5) and conduct a further community engagement process in respect of the proposed alteration.

In particular, section 73(6)(b) of the Local Government Act 2020 refers to the alteration of the local law affecting the rights or responsibilities of any person (emphasis added). The principles of natural justice ensure fair decision-making by requiring a hearing appropriate to the circumstances, a lack of bias and evidence to support a decision, and an inquiry into matters in dispute. This principle dictates that a person must be given a fair opportunity to present their case and respond to any adverse information before a decision is made that could negatively impact them. The proposed by law, by its very nature is targeting a specific minority group, who are not able to participate in the decision making process. Furthermore, homeless people have no ability to engage and present their case with a view to participating in the community investigation.

Most strikingly and of grave concern is the inevitable lack of procedural fairness in implementing and exercising the proposed by law against homeless people. If the people being targeted are of “no fixed abode” there is an inability to serve or give proper notice of a pending court appearance. Inevitably, all hearings will be held in a defendant’s absence and there is no practical way of enforcing penalties. All penalties are likely to be fines, with a defendant having no capacity to pay. In conclusion, the law will not solve any problems. The by law will only create more problems and more hardship. The proposed law is archaic and has no place in our modern developed society. The by law will increase trauma and racial discrimination of our community and has the potential to increase homelessness and recidivism.

We appreciate the enthusiasm which Council have shown in supporting our voice in the Round Table discussions and in submitting this document. It is a valued and necessary partnership which we look forward to continuing. We know that supporting one another is the only way to drive changes and end homelessness in the City of Port Phillip.

We would like to acknowledge and pay our respects to the Traditional Owners of the lands across the Kulin Nations and pay our respects to our Elders. We would like to acknowledge our Community Members who we are representing in this document and across the Round Table discussions, who are displaced and in need. We are committed to ensuring they are not alone and have a voice.

To the team,

I am sure that the thoughts of PMBA members will be replicated across all of the precincts as we discussed in the meeting.

- PMBA have already advocated for CCTV as a deterrent on Bay Street to council.
- Additional 'creative lighting' to create more vibrancy on the street at night and to try and deter any criminal activity due to the activity on the street with hospitality businesses.
- Increased police patrolling and presence – which we understand is a VICPOL issue
- The close proximity of housing commission housing to our shopping precinct makes the precinct an easy and quick target for theft and antisocial behaviour.

An increased view from the Port Melbourne community is the fact that there is often video evidence (due to RING doorbell cameras etc) showing crimes being committed, or scoping of property in order to commit crime, but there seems to be little that can be done about it.

- The car break ins and thefts, home invasions, parcel thefts, attempted break ins, and people walking around trying door handles to find an open door etc

Unfortunately we do not have solutions to offer other than addressing the above with cameras, more police and additional lighting. Relocation of housing commission properties other areas of the suburb may assist in taking the toll away from the main strip.

Thank you for helping to address these issues.

Submission to the City of Port Phillip Council on the Community Safety Roundtable

Port Phillip Community Group welcomes the opportunity to identify both short-term and long-term actions to enhance community safety in the City of Port Phillip. We acknowledge the concerns of residents and businesses who feel unsafe or impacted by individuals sleeping rough in public spaces.

As a wraparound support provider with two drop-in services, we encounter aggression, impacts of rough sleeping and disruptive behaviour at our hub in Carlisle Street and the Alma Road Community House. Council's outreach workers are an excellent resource that enables our service to continue as we work through issues facing the individual without clogging the justice system.

We strongly urge the City of Port Phillip to work collaboratively with Port Phillip Community Group and our network of service partners to address upstream issues such as financial hardship, maintaining tenancies, providing safe gathering places and skill building of traders and residents to address community safety at all levels of society.

To address both community concerns and the well-being of those experiencing homelessness, we propose the following intervention and prevention strategies, either directly or in partnership with local service providers and community.

1. Assertive InReach: Increased investment in assertive InReach services to connect people to wrap-around programs which are crucial for individuals with complex needs. This approach ensures that social isolation and loneliness issues are addressed enabling tenants to maintain stable housing. This has previously included provision of Social Meals at rooming houses which provided soft referrals to support services for people who would not walk into a place –based services or hubs.
2. Building Planning Permits – councils need to consider mandatory requirements as part of planning permits for developers to provide spaces for concierge services and communal spaces for all medium to high density buildings particularly for community and public housing designs to encourage place-based socialisation. People living in temporary accommodation which tend to be bedsits often do not have appropriate space to connect and socialise leading them to congregate on streets.
3. Tenancy Transition Support: The planned public housing redevelopments must have measures to ensure housing supports for people being displaced by the Big Build construction so that they do not contribute to increased levels of rough sleeping in the LGA. Public towers tend to be unsafe places for women and children making cars a safer living option. The proposed law changes will have a negative impact on this cohort. Funding a social housing residents' network that advocates for the rights of the tenants and actively addresses unsafe behaviours in the towers will reduce the overflow of people onto streets.
4. Active Support for Traders - In the current fragmented political climate, safety of all residents has become paramount. A council led trauma informed conversation to build the capacity and capability of the traders in the area will assist to navigate the challenges faced by traders. Additionally, material relief vouchers that can be used locally will help to change the relationship dynamics and start to rebuild community.

In response to objective 2: Explore how local laws can be used to improve community safety and the amenity of public spaces

It is commendable that City of Port Phillip and Merribek are two local government areas that have exceptions to section 42 of the local laws for a person who is homeless or in need of secure accommodation, have complex needs because of mental or physical disability or illness.

It reflects the ethos of an inclusive city that is a place for all members of our community. A liveable Port Phillip that is safer should not come at the expense of the providing supports and enabling people to be comfortable and express their identities.

The crime data presented to support the changes to the local laws are not linked to housing outcomes and therefore cannot be used to justify a change that will further disadvantage and impinge of the human rights of members of the community who are in transitional or crisis accommodation settings. The crime data is more reflective of the transient population that enjoys the vibrant culture of the city as a hub for cultural and creative pursuits.

Introducing barriers of sleeping, laying, sitting on council land or footpath is a colonial approach that ignores the culture and practices of the first nations people of the area. There is a strong link of the local tribes to the dunes of the City of Port Phillip. To remove people from the area will further retraumatize another generation of indigenous communities' and trigger displacement trauma. This will exacerbate issues such as mental health, drug and alcohol dependence which are precursors to homelessness.

Our proposed alternative to changing the local laws is for council to support:

1. Ngargee Tree Initiative: This trial which temporarily provided a gathering space for rough sleepers before intervention from Parks Victoria and SES was a community led solution supported by service providers. Council should work with Parks Victoria and SES to make the area safe for people to congregate without fear of harassment and discrimination.
2. Alma Road Community House: Council should work with service providers to have communal spaces such as neighbourhood houses with adequate transport facilities for individuals experiencing homelessness to connect with services, engage in recreation, and build community that is not focused simply on surviving homelessness but on building the connections and capabilities they need to rebuild their lives.

The causes of homelessness are the result of decades of policy decisions across social housing, mental health, and disability care. We urge the City of Port Phillip to continue to follow the course of a compassionate, evidence-based approach.

We know that together, we can make homelessness rare, brief and once-off.

Submission to the City of Port Phillip Council on the Community Safety Roundtable

Submitted by Port Phillip Zero

AlfredHealth

FIRSTSTEP

Addiction + Mental Health

HOMELESSNESS

Uniting

Port Phillip Zero welcomes the opportunity to identify both short-term and long-term actions to enhance community safety in the City of Port Phillip. Accompanying this submission is a supplementary submission by Southside Justice to inform the proposed changes to local laws.

Councils are essential partners in the effort to end homelessness, and Port Phillip Zero is a key initiative of council working alongside the homelessness sector to create meaningful change. In the City of Port Phillip Local Government Area, the number of people sleeping rough has declined from 91 people in June 2018 to well under half that number in March 2025 (refer to appendix 1).

The causes of homelessness are the result of decades of policy decisions across social housing, mental health and disability care to name a few and its resolution for some people will take time. We urge the City of Port Phillip to choose to continue to follow the course of a compassionate, evidence-based approach rather than punitive measures that only deepen the crisis.

We strongly urge the City of Port Phillip to work collaboratively with the homelessness sector, community organizations, and people with lived experience to create sustainable and humane solutions.

Intervention and Prevention Ideas

To address both community concerns and the well-being of those experiencing homelessness, we propose the following intervention and prevention strategies, either directly or in partnership with local service providers and community.

1. Port Phillip Zero Initiative: This Collective Impact project, utilizing a By-Name List (BNL), has already demonstrated success in integrating multiple service systems to prioritize housing and support solutions. The Council should strengthen and expand this model.
2. Assertive Outreach & Housing First Programs: Increased investment in assertive outreach to connect to people sleeping rough and long-term, wrap-around case management programs is crucial for individuals with complex needs, ensuring they receive the necessary support to access and maintain stable housing.
3. Wellington Street Common Ground (WSCG): This new and soon to start tenanting initiative should be supported with additional resourcing to ensure culturally safe alcohol and other drug, legal, and mental health services are provided through a combination of support from First Step, Ngwala Willumbong, Better Health Network and Alfred Health
4. Tenancy Transition Support: Individuals on the BNL should have dedicated pathways into stable housing with support to manage the transition from homelessness to housing in a sustainable way. With planned public housing redevelopments, there must be measures to ensure housing availability extends beyond existing public housing towers tenants to people sleeping rough and on the Port Phillip BNL.
5. Harnessing available housing resources: St Kilda Community Housing has proposed a 20-bed location that could be incorporated into a new permanent supportive housing development like Wellington Street Common Ground. We urge Council to support this development either directly or through targeted advocacy with the State Government.

6. Gathering Place Initiative: A long-standing idea whose time has come. Council should lead work to locate and develop a safe, low-barrier space for individuals experiencing homelessness to connect with services, engage in recreation, and build community that is no longer focused simply on surviving homelessness but on building the connections and capabilities they need to rebuild their lives.
7. Advocacy for Systemic Change: Many key solutions lie beyond local government powers. However, the Council can play a leadership role in advocating for:
  - Improvements to PACER (Police, Ambulance, and Clinician Early Response) programs to provide crisis mental health support.
  - Legislative changes to ensure a more balanced approach to mental health care, particularly around involuntary admissions for at-risk individuals.

In addition, we recommend that Council advocate to the State and Federal Governments to invest in:

- More social housing
- More assertive outreach
- More crisis accommodation
- More Housing First housing and support responses
- Increase income support

We acknowledge the concerns of residents and businesses who feel unsafe or impacted by individuals sleeping rough in public spaces and note that not all people creating safety concerns are homeless. However, while some individuals experiencing homelessness may engage in criminal behaviour, it is critical to separate homelessness from criminality.

Homelessness is not a crime, but rather a dire consequence of systemic failures, including the chronic lack of social housing in Victoria.

People who sleep rough face severe hardship and significantly reduced life expectancy compared to the general population. Many have experienced trauma, abuse, and systemic failures that have left them with no other options. Addressing homelessness through punitive measures, such as fines and confiscation of personal belongings, does not address the root cause of the issue and only exacerbates their suffering. Instead, we urge the Council to adopt compassionate, evidence-based solutions that prioritize housing and support services over criminalization.

Research consistently demonstrates that enforcement-based approaches worsen homelessness rather than resolve it. Fines and legal actions are largely unenforceable against people without financial means, creating additional strain on the justice system and increasing overall costs to ratepayers. Further, punitive measures compound trauma and make it harder for individuals to transition into stable housing.

People sleeping rough are part of our community. They too face violence and danger—often at higher rates than the public. They die younger, experience more health issues, and suffer from extreme poverty. But they are not separate from us; they are us. We see this moment as an opportunity, not to move toward short-term responses that will do little to solve the issue and instead make things worse. This is our opportunity to continue to lead the Victorian community by responding with empathy, effectiveness, and a commitment to real solutions.

Appendix 1: Rough sleeping homelessness Port Phillip: 2011 to 2025

Also known as ‘Unsheltered homelessness’ or ‘Primary homelessness’, sleeping rough includes people sleeping in improvised dwellings, squats, cars, railway carriages and tents, or sleeping out on the streets and in parks.

The major sources of data about the scale of rough sleeping homelessness are the ABS Census, Street Counts conducted by council and partners, and with By-Name Lists (BNL) created by the agencies who are partners within the Port Phillip Zero partnership. These are shown in the graph below along with a trendline.

ABS Census data shown starts in 2011 when LGA specific data (SA4) showing Port Phillip was first publicly available, and continues through 2016 and into 2021, the year of the last Census. In 2018 the City of Port Phillip conducted its first Street Count to investigate the prevalence of rough sleeping and to provide an initial assessment, based on the severity of people’s circumstances, in order to best match housing and support.

In July 2019, the Port Phillip Zero Project commenced and began using a By-Name List (BNL). People are added to the BNL when they are confirmed to be sleeping rough and only then. People stay on the list until they meet one of the 3 outflow criteria. Either they are securely and stably housed, or they become inactive (move out of area, local services lose contact with them, or they move into an institutional setting like a jail), or they die. This list keeps track of current living situations and is updated at a minimum every two weeks and usually more regularly. BNL data shown below is from February each year to retain consistency with the timing of the Street count except for the latest data which is from the end of March 2025.

1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Sacred Heart Mission (SHM) welcomes the opportunity to contribute to the City of Port Phillip's Community Safety Roundtable through this formal submission, as well as attendance at the Roundtable on 19 March 2025.

Sleeping rough is not a choice – it is a last resort for people with nowhere safe to go. Criminalising rough sleeping is not only cruel but also ignores the real issue: the severe shortage of social and affordable housing in Victoria and across Australia; and the lack of safe public spaces. 102,000 Victorians sought help from homelessness services in 2023/24; and Victoria had 30,660 people experiencing homelessness on Census night in 2021; 7.5% of them were sleeping rough.

More than 61,000 Victorians are on the public housing waitlist. Rents have risen 13.7% in a year and combined with the cost-of-living crisis, it is pushing more people into housing insecurity and homelessness.

At SHM, we are seeing this firsthand. Over the past year, around 1,100 new people have come to our Engagement Hub on Grey Street St Kilda – many experiencing homelessness for the first time. This is in addition to the hundreds of regular visitors who rely on our services, from housing support and health programs to women's services and social inclusion initiatives.

SHM has been involved with the Port Phillip Zero initiative since it began. We work closely with the City of Port Phillip and local services to identify and support people sleeping rough. Between February 2022 and February 2024, Port Phillip Zero achieved a 40% decrease in rough sleeping in the City of Port Phillip, indicating that the initiative is effective. This is the result of deep collaboration between Council and local community organisations and people with lived experience to achieve meaningful change for people sleeping rough.

We acknowledge the City of Port Phillip's historic sensitivity to this complex social issue. Over many decades, progressive approaches focused on the well-being of vulnerable people have kept the rough sleeping community safe, housed and treated with respect and care. We urge the City of Port Phillip to continue with compassionate, evidence-based approaches to support rough sleepers, rather than resorting to punitive measures including issuing fines. We believe such an approach will be ineffective, harmful to individuals and undermine the significant progress that has been made to decrease homelessness in our community. We further urge investment in real solutions: building more social housing and adequately funding homelessness and housing support services. This should include flexible specialist support services for people with complex needs, such as those related to alcohol and other drug (AOD) use and mental health challenges.

To solve the housing shortage in the City of Port Phillip and beyond, Victoria must deliver 6,000 new social homes each year. This will provide the more than 61,000 Victorians on the public housing waitlist with a stable foundation from which to rebuild their lives.

Beyond housing, people in crisis need the right support at the right time. Investing in wrap-around services – combining housing with mental health, substance use support and other essential services – ensures people don't just exit homelessness but stay housed.

With over 40 years of experience as a community services organisation, we know that when people are part of the decisions that affect them, the outcomes are always better. This is why we strongly advocate for First Nations housing responses – designed and delivered by First Nations people to meet the needs of their communities. Mana-na woorn-tyeen maar-takoort: the Victorian Aboriginal Housing and Homelessness Framework sets out the solutions and urges all levels of government to respond.

2. RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Family Violence & Housing Security

- Prioritise increasing crisis accommodation options for family violence victim-survivors and their children.
- Provide trauma-informed support services for women and children escaping violence, including case management, financial assistance and priority access to housing.

2. Housing Availability & Affordability

- Advocate for greater investment in public and social housing, including fast-tracking developments and repurposing vacant properties.
- Introduce rent caps or stronger rental protections to prevent excessive rent increases.
- Expand subsidised housing for vulnerable groups, including First Nations communities.
- Work within communities to prevent neighbour fatigue and address concerns in a timely manner.
- Advocate to the Commonwealth Government to increase income support payments, particularly JobSeeker, above the poverty line.
- Build more congregate housing models like Wellington Street Common Ground and tailor to specific cohorts such as older women.

3. Mental Health System Barriers

- Push for greater accessibility to mental health assessments to prevent individuals from falling through the cracks.
- Advocate for wraparound services that combine housing with mental health and substance use support.
- Increase funding for outreach mental health teams and develop a flexible, innovative service model able to reach individuals on the street who are undiagnosed and untreated.

4. Cultural Safety

- Work with First Nations organisations to create culturally appropriate gathering spaces within housing developments and elsewhere in the community.
- Support agencies such as Ngwala, which provides community engagement workers and Initial Assessment and Planning (IAP) Workers for assessments and crisis intervention for First Nations peoples experiencing homelessness.
- Support other agencies' programs such as Better Health Network (BHN's) Indigenous Access and Equity Program, which provides culturally safe services to First Nations communities.
- Ensure First Nations housing is located within or near their communities to prevent social isolation.
- Educate law enforcement and policymakers on culturally safe policing practices to prevent unnecessary targeting of First Nations people.
- Provide housing equity for rainbow communities, who are among the most marginalised groups and at high risk of experiencing homelessness, poverty and social exclusion.

5. Public Housing Maintenance & Allocation

- Implement timeframe guarantees for maintenance so that people can move in without long delays.
- Hold housing providers accountable for prioritising safe and habitable conditions.

- Explore tenant-led maintenance initiatives where small repairs can be addressed with community involvement.

6. Discriminatory Housing Practices

- Adequately fund community housing providers so that they can equitably accept tenancy applications from people receiving JobSeeker, without compromising their organisation's financial sustainability.
- Ensure rooming house regulations are enforced to prevent discrimination against Job Seeker recipients.
- Provide support to housing providers to house vulnerable people with higher complexities.

7. Resource & Funding Shortages

- Push for increased funding for frontline homelessness and housing support services.
- Advocate for multi-agency collaboration to ensure services (e.g., housing, mental health, family violence support) work together rather than in silos.
- Improve Housing Establishment Funds (HEF) for people, to reduce rough sleeping episodes.

8. Safe Public Spaces

- Ensure there are safe community and public places in the City of Port Phillip for First Nations and vulnerable people to gather where they are safe and access resources and information.

9. Community Education

- Provide community education on homelessness that helps people understand its root causes and emphasises that solutions should focus on housing and support, rather than punitive responses.

10. Retain positive City of Port Phillip initiatives

- Continue with the current initiatives within City of Port Phillip, including the Zero Project, Homelessness Action Strategy and Growing Affordable Housing Strategy and public forums in the community.
- Maintain commitment to Diversity. Equity and Inclusion (DEI) demonstrated by City of Port Phillip – such as the Accessibility Action Plan, LGBTIQA+ Action Plan, Reconciliation Action Plan and Welcoming Cities.

3. OUR ENGAGEMENT HUBS

The courtyard of our Grey St Engagement Hub in St Kilda is a safe gathering place for all those who need it. SHM is experiencing a growing demand for support. Over the last year, we counted approximately 1,100 new people at our hub, many of them are experiencing homelessness for the first time.

In addition, we have hundreds of regular visitors who access our services, ranging from free meals to case management and long-term housing support. Around 10% of our participants identify as First Nations people.

In 2024, our Engagement Hub provided 3,800 episodes of support - appointments, emergency relief and crisis intervention. Of these, 80 were assisted with ongoing support for a period of 8-10 weeks and linked into longer term services. We also provided support to 37 people in our 'over 50s' targeted case management program in 2024. These people were experiencing housing, health and premature ageing related issues, and required an average of 6-8 months of support.

SHM also offers wellbeing and inclusion activities, including a music group, art therapy, drug education, optometry, yoga, vaccination clinics, haircuts and off-site osteopathy at Victoria University. We had 2,038 presentations for these wellbeing activities over a 12-month period.

Our service receives referrals from a variety of sources, both formal and informal. These referrers play a critical role in connecting individuals in need with the Engagement Hub. Examples include NDIS workers, Launch Housing, The Salvation Army Crisis Centre and Access Health, Homeless Outreach Psychiatric Service (HOPS), Ngwala, a range of Community Housing Providers, Hospital Admission Risk Program (HARP, through the Alfred) as well as referrals through word of mouth.

At present, we are open from 8.30am-1pm. Our experience is that participants can best engage during the morning and early afternoon period, which is when other services and supports are also open. We currently operate the Engagement Hubs through a mixture of government funding and our own internal revenue stream. However, with additional funding, we could expand our services to offer longer opening hours and provide a safe space for vulnerable people throughout the day.

3.1 The impact of mental health and alcohol and drug use

SHM has an ongoing relationship with Alfred Homeless Outreach Psychiatric Services (HOPS) to provide enhanced pathways to treatment and secondary consultation. We conduct a daily check-in on weekdays with HOPS, usually focusing on 2–3 participants we know - a mix of new referrals and people receiving ongoing mental health support.

Broadly, we have found there has been a general increase in presentations involving complex behaviours, including untreated mental ill health and substance use over the last two years.

In our experience, people who have been rough sleeping for extensive periods of time have significant trauma, untreated mental health and substance use. This often leads to complex behaviours, including repeated evictions from previous housing and crisis accommodation. It is well understood that people's experiences of trauma can lead to adaptive behaviours that present as high-risk - aggression, difficulties with emotional regulation and paranoia.

While this is a small cohort of people, within an increasingly large cohort of people who are experiencing homelessness, we understand this behaviour does attract attention in the local community and it is not unreasonable for people to be fearful when exposed to or interacting with those presenting in this manner. However, punitive responses are the wrong lens to examine complex social issues, and more practical solutions are needed.

We believe that the community needs advanced collaboration on the ground with psychiatric, alcohol and other drug services and homelessness services, further resources and new, targeted approaches to supporting these individuals, including services that are co-designed with rough sleepers.

4. PORT PHILLIP ZERO PROJECT AND BY-NAME LIST (BNL)

SHM is actively involved in the Port Phillip Zero Project, a collaborative initiative supported by a range of local agencies. Its' primary goal is to move individuals experiencing homelessness in the City of Port Phillip closer to long-term housing, with weekly meetings across the involved agencies to discuss individuals identified as rough sleepers in the area and categorise them into target groups using the By Name List (BNL), ensuring continuous tracking and assessment.

The BNL is used to:

- Track housing offers and updates on the Victorian Housing Register (VHR)
- Identify individual challenges, including mental and physical health decline
- Assess risks, including aggressive behaviours
- Document last known locations and housing outcomes

Agencies continue to assess individual needs, advocate for housing solutions and monitor the effectiveness of the initiative; and the project team shares information on rooming house closures and local housing providers.

SHM plays a vital role in identifying and supporting individuals who are newly experiencing homelessness through its Engagement Hubs. When new individuals present to us, staff gather relevant information, ensuring that informed and appropriate support can be provided. If consent is given, details such as the person's name, Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander status, gender, age and last known location are recorded. In cases where consent is not granted, the individual may be documented as Jane or John Doe.

The coordinators continuously monitor new presentations and whether service users have accessed services three or more times. When this occurs, their details are raised at the BNL meeting for potential inclusion on the list. Additionally, pathways workers assist service users in completing a Victorian Housing Register (VHR) assessment, with these updates also being shared at meetings and reflected in the tracking spreadsheet.

SHM remains committed to understanding the accommodation circumstances of those experiencing homelessness. This includes tracking where individuals are staying, whether that be couch surfing, residing in squats, living in tents or staying in their cars. Furthermore, SHM ensures that appropriate program supports are in place, such as the Care Finder initiative and the Journey to Social Inclusion (J2SI) program, helping to create pathways out of homelessness in the shortest possible time.

For individuals who have been on the BNL for an extended period, SHM continues to monitor their progress. Updates on any challenges, safety concerns or new information are regularly documented and reviewed to ensure that service users receive the most relevant and effective support available. Through this ongoing process, SHM remains dedicated to facilitating sustainable solutions for those experiencing homelessness and ensuring that no one is left without the care and assistance they need.

5. INTENSIVE SUPPORT PROGRAMS

In addition, SHM operates several programs to provide intensive, long-term support to people who have experienced and are experiencing homelessness, to break the cycle of homelessness. Some examples are detailed below:

5.1 GreenLight – outreach program

We support people to move out of rough sleeping through our outreach program GreenLight, provided in partnership with VincentCare and The Salvation Army and funded by the Rough Sleeper Action Plan in 2018. We work with people who have obtained a long-term housing offer, to settle into housing and maintain their tenancy.

Since then, the consortium has supported at least 273 referrals per financial year. SHM has already met our targets for the current financial year, supporting 107 people from July 2024 to February 2025.

The funding is due to lapse on 30 June 2025. Together with sector partners, we have advocated strongly to retain this program and adapt our response to offer tenancy support to prevent homelessness.

5.2 Journey to Social Inclusion (J2SI)

Our housing first program, Journey to Social Inclusion (J2SI), successfully works with people experiencing long-term homelessness to secure and maintain stable housing and build community connections. It was the first service in Australia to apply the 'housing first' principles whereby participants are given housing in the first six months and then engage in intensive support over a three-year period. Four years after participants start the program, 90% of people maintain stable housing. J2SI also was the first Social Impact Investment in Victoria which subsequently became the first Payment by Results program. Since the pilot program in 2009, J2SI has supported 640 participants.

We are now rolling out J2SI across Victoria, supporting hundreds more people – in partnership with the Victorian Government, The Salvation Army, Uniting Vic.Tas, VincentCare Victoria and local Aboriginal Community Controlled Organisations. This program will run between April 2025 and 2028, supporting 240 people across the consortium and SHM will support 60 of these people directly.

6. CONCLUSION

We acknowledge that there are people in our community who are frustrated and feel unsafe because of the public presence and behaviour of people rough sleeping in the City of Port Phillip. We believe it is vital that all people – including people who are rough sleeping – have safe places to gather and are supported to access resources and information as needed.

However, we believe that criminalising homelessness by undertaking legal action and issuing fines is not the answer. People experiencing homelessness have already been failed and traumatised by the system. Compounding that by then criminalising their suffering is cruel and does more harm than good.

Financial penalties will not be enforceable to people who cannot pay them but rather exacerbate their difficulties transitioning into stable housing. Furthermore, this will create additional burdens on the justice system, be costly to taxpayers and does nothing to address the root causes of these issues.

People sleeping rough are part of our community, but they experience a much higher risk of violence, complex physical and mental health issues, poverty, trauma and premature ageing and death than the rest of the community.

City of Port Phillip is known and respected for its commitment to being a socially inclusive, equitable and economically thriving community. We believe it is vital that the City of Port Phillip rejects any proposal that is punitive and instead, continue the positive and productive work it is already doing including Port Phillip Zero, Wellington Street Common Ground, housing and homelessness strategies and its commitment to diversity, equity and inclusion.

My comments on the proposed bylaws are as follows:

- Homelessness is not a crime.
- The right to an adequate standard of living, including housing, is recognized as a human right, and actions related to homelessness should be considered within this context.
- The council is further punishing all homeless people in CoPP for the behavior of a few.
- The imposition of a fine is pointless as people who are homeless are able to apply to have those fines waived based on 'special circumstances' under the Infringements Act 2006 (Vic)
- The removal of homeless person's personal property is unconscionable.
- the bylaws will capture people who are forced to live in their car due to lack of housing. For example women and children fleeing family violence.
- There are numerous support services within CoPP to address homelessness.
- These support services need to be coordinated and located in a single place to make them easily accessible to homeless persons and the support services that assist them. This could be a website initially but ideally a physical space.
- The CoPP need to allocate resources to establish a "Hub" to house these services or provide a bus or coffee cart which can be set up where the homeless congregate, for example, Peninsula CLC Street Law coffee van

The residents of CoPP need to be educated to show more empathy for the homeless and other marginalised groups.

SOUTH PORT COMMUNITY HOUSING GROUP

Introduction

The increased visibility of people sleeping rough on our streets is a daily reminder of our collective inability to meet the basic needs of those most vulnerable in our community.

The staff and Board of South Port Community Housing Group feel sufficiently moved by the City of Port Phillip's proposal to investigate changing local laws to prohibit people from sleeping rough on council land, roads, or footpath by way of issuing fines, as to make this submission to Council.

Alongside other participants, whose input was sought at the Community Roundtable on 19 March 2025, we seek to highlight the urgent need for a more integrated, community led, and humane approach to addressing the increasing issue of homelessness in the City of Port Phillip.

South Port Community Housing Group has a strong 40 yearlong connection to the community within the City of Port Phillip, primarily through housing adult singles and young people who have been faced with homelessness and social exclusion. Since our formation, our Board and organisational governance have been driven by community leaders who live or have a strong connection to the area.

The City of Port Phillip has traditionally been an area with a high proportion of short-term or shared accommodation. Private boarding houses, rooming houses and hotels provided affordable housing to a mixed client group of single adults including port workers and the unemployed. However, over the last 30 years, the area has undergone rapid gentrification, which has resulted in this type of private affordable housing option all but disappearing. Less than one per cent of private rental housing is now affordable to low-income households. Closures of large rooming houses such as the Gatwick, have forced many into the spiral of homelessness and prison services. The area has for many years experienced higher levels of homelessness and rough sleeping to other local government areas of Melbourne.

In our view and experience, punishing vulnerable people for being homelessness can only serve to make the situation worse.

Our Experience, Service Model, and Expertise

Over 40 years, South Port Community Housing Group has accumulated specialist knowledge within the City of Port Phillip of the risks of homelessness and in keeping people within the community at risk of homelessness housed.

SOUTH PORT COMMUNITY HOUSING GROUP

SPCHG target housing exclusively to people in the lowest income groups coming from homelessness or housing crisis.

SPCHG runs two programs:

- Long term housing for disadvantaged single people coming from experiences of homelessness. This housing (approximately 314 units within the City of Port Phillip) is primarily high-density blocks of flats and self-contained studio apartments (once rooming houses) scattered and well located next to services and supports.
- Case managed support for young people facing homelessness.

The specialised SPCHG model of social housing management for this group incorporates the following key features.

- An intensive level of engagement with renters at a personal level.
- An intensive level of staff presence in monitoring properties.
- Highly trained and experienced staff – qualified in social service provision.
- Trauma informed service delivery practice.
- Clear communication to renters of expectations and consequences.
- Focus on prevention and early intervention in resolving tenancy issues.
- Negotiating creative strategies to sustain tenancies.
- Creating opportunities for community engagement and participation.
- Maintaining a strong network of partnerships with local support agencies.

We offer people seeking social housing the opportunity to 'advance' through SPCHG's range of housing stock from small bed-sits through to one-bedroom flats. This aligns with Housing First approaches, in meeting people where they are at, to provide flexible and tailored support when and where needed. We place a strong emphasis on meaningful and effective communication which aims to build trust and engagement in local services, events and community life.

Our youth homelessness program supports around 25 young people (and dependents) at any one time to find and obtain a safe and secure place to live and engage with relevant services. Most of the young people we support have had transient lifestyles, histories of abuse and trauma, and face significant difficulties in negotiating the demands of daily living.

SOUTH PORT COMMUNITY HOUSING GROUP

In 2021, South Port Community Housing Group led a consortium with Better Health Network for the Victorian Government's groundbreaking Homeless to Home Program launched in response to the COVID-19 pandemic lockdowns in Melbourne.

SPCHG held responsibility for successfully overseeing the housing of 50 individuals of highly complex needs, with case management provided by Bridge It and Better Health Network. The tangible results of this innovative program can clearly be seen in the 40 per cent reduction of rough sleeping in the City of Port Phillip, over this period. These outcomes attributed to the efforts of agencies working intensively together when housing is readily available and accessible to address this problem.

More recently, in response to increasing demands for our services and complexity of our renter cohort, we have made changes to our tenancy management model including a new case management capacity. The new role works intensively with our most vulnerable and complex renters to intervene and broker much needed supports to prevent the typical deterioration of tenancies and patterns leading to hoarding, mental illness, and anti-social behaviours.

We are seeing the value this is creating through more stable tenancies and adherence to paying rent and settling into the community. We believe that "investing" time and effort into people otherwise struggling with social exclusion can, and will, pay off with broader outcomes for the wider community.

Recommended Actions to Increase Public Safety and Perceptions of Public Safety in Port Phillip

Short Term (12 months)

1. Increase resources to Port Phillip Zero to embed further local agency support workers within the City of Port Phillip outreach response.
2. A targeted social media and print campaign promoting the outcomes and success of Port Phillip Zero among residents and retailers, to increase awareness and understanding and most importantly, buy in, to a whole of community response to the issue of homelessness within the City of Port Phillip.

SOUTH PORT COMMUNITY HOUSING GROUP

Long Term (1-4 years)

1. Dedicated Intensive Brokered In-Reach Trial

South Port Community Housing Group is willing to cost share a service on terms to be negotiated with City of Port Phillip that value adds to existing services and builds upon recent experience delivering intensive case management based on Housing First approaches. This service will be dedicated within the City of Port Phillip to connecting with those who would otherwise be fined under the current proposal to change local bylaws. It will instead build the preliminary understanding of their circumstances with participating local agencies and to start the process of connecting them to the services that they might need. This service would trial for two years and be fully accountable to the City of Port Phillip via funding under the banner of Community Safety initiatives via the Port Phillip Zero initiative. The deliverables would be monitored via the existing reporting structures of the Port Phillip Zero initiative, providing valuable action research outcomes for the shared partnership and community led approach.

2. Stronger collaboration with locally based housing providers to facilitate access to available land for social housing development.

The In Our Backyard, Growing Affordable Housing in Port Phillip 2015-2025 Plan committed Council to contribute over the decade to 2025, $30 million, through a pipeline of suitable developable Council land ($25 million value at 2016) together with cash contributions of $500,000 per year ($5m). The Plan committed Council to seek expressions of interest from Housing First, South Port Community Housing Group and St Kilda Community Housing to develop these properties, to ensure that best value (social, economic and environmental) is achieved for the residents of the City of Port Phillip.

Its key purpose was to continue to ensure Council's longstanding leadership in affordable housing and commitment to maintaining a diverse, inclusive and equitable City, especially for those who are disadvantaged and marginalised is achieved. The Vision was to:

SOUTH PORT COMMUNITY HOUSING GROUP

Grow the supply and diversity of affordable housing in the City of Port Phillip to address priority local housing needs, including for the most disadvantaged and marginalised.

The outcome of this approach was to achieve the following:

- 170 new units (under one or more trusts or other mechanism)
- 750 new units (partnerships - with governments, private and philanthropic sectors, and new planning mechanisms)
- Council properties worth $25m (2015) be transferred to a one or more trusts or other mechanism.
- $5m Council cash contributions.
- Leverage of $36 - $41m investment (forecast)

In the final year of the plan and at a time of unprecedented need, the strategy has not met its targets for the number of dwellings or transfer of council land. This is despite numerous sites including the bitumen carparks at Jackson Street, Park Street, South Melbourne Market, Bath Street, recently marketed land in Carlisle Street and the air-rights above single level council assets in locations where multi-level development is supported, remaining examples of lazy assets that could already be yielding immediate positive community impact and leveraging State, Developer and Philanthropic investment. This approach is consistent with the identified need for more intensive land use and social housing as essential social infrastructure in inner City areas, close to services and supports.

Whilst SPCHG, acknowledges and applauds the contribution of Council to the Common Ground development in Wellington Street, St Kilda, we note the significant shortfall in action against need within the municipality and a significant slow-down in council initiatives.

We call on Council to recommit to a dedicated and intensive program of support, in partnership with locally based Registered Housing Agencies leveraging State and Federal funding, to increase affordable housing supply through identifying further opportunities on Council owned land.

Submission to the City of Port Phillip on Community Safety

4 April 2025

About Southside Justice

Southside Justice is a place-based community legal centre providing free legal advice and support to residents with a low income living in the Local Government Areas (LGA) of Port Phillip (CoPP), Bayside and Stonnington. We also operate a state-wide legal service for sex workers. We collaborate with many local community organisations and conduct multiple outreach services to partner organisations located within the CoPP.

In the last financial year 23-24:

- 80% of our clients were women
- 82% were experiencing or at risk of family violence
- 50% of our clinic clients<sup>1</sup> were experiencing homelessness
- 40% of clients who we successfully assisted to have fines withdrawn had a direct link between the fines and their experience of homelessness, frequently co-occurring with mental health challenges and family violence
- 98% of fines review applications submitted were successful, resulting in fines being waived.

Endorsement of Port Phillip Zero Submission

We endorse the submission and all recommendations of Port Phillip Zero on Community Safety.

This submission should be considered as supplementary to that of Port Phillip Zero, with a greater emphasis on the role of local laws given our expertise as a legal service.

We urge CoPP to continue to build on the established foundation of collaborative work that Port Phillip Zero exemplifies. Now more than ever, amid a worsening national homelessness crisis<sup>2</sup>, this work must continue and be further strengthened.

Use of local laws to promote community safety and amenity

Local laws and people experiencing homelessness

Our view is that local laws are not a useful way to address the perceived impact of rough sleeping on community safety and amenity beyond those already in place in the CoPP.

We note that, as people experiencing homelessness are themselves members of our community, a human rights-based approach to addressing and ultimately ending homelessness will promote safety and amenity for all members of our community.

Local laws can sanction against or mandate individual behaviour and choices and can authorise officers to take direct steps to physically rectify or prevent a situation or hazard.

In the case of local laws targeting individual behaviour, they can only do so with the threat of punishment in the form of issuing fines or the use of coercion like the power to confiscate property. Fines and other coercion can help to shift unwanted behaviour when people are able to make unconstrained choices.<sup>3</sup>

People experiencing primary homelessness and sleeping rough are operating within a very limited range of choices and are engaged in a daily struggle for survival. The only realistic path to changing the way in which people are currently seeking to meet their basic needs, is to better support them in doing so. These include not just physical shelter<sup>4</sup> but:

- safe and secure housing
- access to daily support and essential services, and
- the ability to gather and connect with community in safety.

Our criminal legal and fines enforcement systems distinguish between people making choices about their behaviour, and those whose choices are limited by homelessness, mental health challenges, cognitive disability, addiction and family violence.

People who receive fines for conduct that is intrinsically linked to homelessness and other special circumstances<sup>5</sup> will overwhelmingly, with access to legal help, have those fines waived, as is reflected in Southside Justice's service data seen above.

Given the resources Council and local support services will ultimately commit to issuing, processing, enforcing and then challenging and processing the withdrawal of such fines, and the further harm and trauma caused along the way<sup>6</sup>, we believe seeking to rely further on local laws is unproductive.<sup>7</sup>

We believe the CoPP's Community Amenity Local Law 2023 (CALL) strikes the right balance in empowering local laws officers to remove abandoned, hazardous or genuinely obstructive items from council land (that is, to act directly to prevent and remedy hazards).

In terms of intervening where individual behaviour is concerned, the CALL already prohibits a significant scope of "antisocial behaviour".<sup>8</sup>

<sup>4</sup> The Australian Bureau of Statistics defines homelessness as including where a person's current living arrangement: is in a dwelling that is inadequate; has no tenure, or if their initial tenure is short and not extendable; does not allow them to have control of, and access to, space for social relations.

<sup>7</sup> It is worth noting this study demonstrating significant cost blow outs as a result of implementation of a 'sit, lie' ordinance in the US: Wilking, J, Roll, S, Philhour, D, Hansen, P, and Nevarez, H, 'Understanding the Implications of a Punitive Approach to Homelessness: A Local Case Study' (2020) 10(2) Poverty & Public Policy 95–113. <sup>8</sup> As Council is aware, all of the behaviours currently prohibited in section 17 of the Community Amenity Local Law 2023 are already criminal offences in the Summary Offences Act 1966 and can be responded to by police.

The behaviours already criminalised in both the Summary Offences Act 1966 and section 17 of the CALL, will overwhelmingly be linked to special circumstances such as psychosocial disability when they involve people experiencing homelessness.<sup>9</sup>

People experiencing homelessness and living their lives in public space are more likely to be noticed and their behaviour made the subject of a complaint than housed people who enjoy greater privacy.<sup>10</sup> Section 17 of the CALL already authorises enforcement activities towards people experiencing homelessness and multiple and complex needs<sup>11</sup>, which, as previously outlined, will often ultimately lead to waived fines.

Beyond the CALL, we believe there is no useful role for further local laws in addressing the perceived impact of homelessness on community safety and amenity in CoPP.

- Recommendation: The Council should not increase bylaw powers beyond the current Community Amenity Local Law 2023.
- Recommendation: The Council should retain the CALL in its current form, specifically its protection for people experiencing homelessness and complex needs from being fined.

City of Melbourne

In 2017, the City of Melbourne (CoM) faced similar challenges to those now confronted by the CoPP.

Ultimately, CoM did implement a comprehensive camping ban under its Activities Local Law which does not explicitly exempt people experiencing homelessness or complex needs from punitive sanctions, unlike CoPP.

In this regard CoPP's CALL is an improvement on CoM's approach and a standard bearer for best practice in Victoria regarding homelessness and human rights.<sup>12</sup> CoPP's CALL, rightly, in our view, is focused on empowering local laws officers to address specific hazards and nuisance, as well as harmful antisocial behaviour, rather than focusing on directly targeting and banning rough sleeping or people experiencing homelessness gathering in public.

To mitigate potentially harsh punitive treatment of people experiencing homelessness in the implementation of its local law, CoM ultimately adopted the Homelessness Operating Protocol.<sup>13</sup>

CoPP could consider developing a more detailed operating protocol for its existing local law, in consultation with the organisations involved in the Community Safety Roundtable and adopting a trauma informed, culturally safe and human rights-based approach, particularly to help guide local laws officers in exercising their existing powers.

- Recommendation: The Council should consider developing a homelessness operating protocol to guide implementation of existing local laws.

More recently CoM has engaged private security guards in a pilot to protect Council staff undertaking local laws enforcement specifically related to public alcohol consumption and illegal begging.<sup>14</sup> For the reasons already mentioned, we believe this approach is likely to be unproductive and not consistent with a human rights-based approach.

Rather our recommendation would be for CoPP to explore and consult with community organisations on either an alternative first responder<sup>15</sup> model or some other form of enhanced collaborative service response, as opposed to an expanded or fortified enforcement approach.

The CoPP is fortunate to have local services that already have enormous skill and experience in deploying a harm reduction and public health response to situations that were once considered law enforcement matters and could draw further on this resource.

- Recommendation: The Council should further explore and consult with the local community sector and people with lived experience about a community-based alternative first responder model for behaviour that might otherwise attract a local laws response.
- Recommendation: The Council should explore how resources currently committed to an enforcement response could be diverted to an alternative first responder or enhanced service response.

Merit and feasibility of establishing an ongoing alliance to continue this work over the next four years

We believe that together is better, and strongly support an approach focused on continued and deepening collaboration between all relevant stakeholders in the CoPP.

An ongoing alliance involving the stakeholders from Port Phillip Zero and the Community Safety Roundtable could, among other things, help to:

- Facilitate Council hearing from people with lived experience of sleeping rough or who are otherwise experiencing homelessness in our community, whose voices are not currently being heard.
- Map existing services to understand how they are accessed and identify how modest additional resources could facilitate greater coordination for an enhanced service response to people experiencing homelessness and complex needs in the CoPP.
- Support and feed into the work of Trauma Aware Port Phillip in educating, supporting and building the skills and resilience of local traders and residents to enhance social cohesion.

An alliance of this kind would not necessarily need to be a new body. For efficiency, this could be achieved through modestly extending the terms of reference and perhaps membership of Port Phillip Zero in consultation with its member organisations.

Subject: Community Safety Roundtable – Victoria Police Submission

Dear Ian,

I take this opportunity to thank you for facilitating the Community Safety Roundtable (roundtable) on 19 March 2025 and provide a submission on behalf of Victoria Police. This submission is made in accordance with the terms of reference governing the roundtable.

Background

Over recent years, St Kilda particularly Fitzroy Street, has attracted those who are homeless and those purporting to be homeless which has enlivened pop up tent cities and encampments in and around commercial zones, shopping precincts and residential areas. It is acknowledged that the geographical footprint of such encampments is far greater and encompasses many areas within the City of Port Phillip.

Based on routine and regular feedback to police from residents, business owners and other community groups; the growth in encampments and rough sleepers in and around commercial zones and shopping precincts is the primary driver of negative community sentiment and perceptions of safety.

Perception in the community is that this cohort are engaged in crime such as theft, assault, drug use, intimidatory behaviour, weapons offences and anti-social behaviour thus impacting amenity and generating fear by those who live, pass through, or operate business where these encampments are established.

This situation has resulted in a loud, angry, frustrated and somewhat distressed resident and business cohort calling for action over the preceding years. This sentiment was reflected during the Port Phillip Neighbourhood Policing Forum on 3 December 2024 where more than 120 members of the community vocally and angrily expressed their frustration at the situation and again during the 'CoPP for COPS' rally on 20 January 2025.

Current Policing Response

The policing response to date has been one of enforcement, joint patrols with City of Port Phillip Local Laws Officers and engagement with social welfare agencies. Outside of a regular presence by the Neighbourhood Policing Team, Operation LION is a standing operation deployed to target encampments in commercial zones such as Fitzroy Street which is a significant driver of complaints from across the community. Operation LION whilst having a foundation in enforcement and disruption, also sees our members engage with social and support services as a matter of practice.

Operation LION is an intensive fixed period focus on crime and anti-social behaviour in and around encampments and has been undertaken during August, November 2024 and March 2025 over the course of 14 – 21 days at a time. Operation LION sees a heavy police investment in human resources and specialist policing services however routinely yields low offending data resulting in short term positive outcomes with little or no impact on the foundational issue of the encampments themselves.

Without strategic work in this space there exists a risk to Victoria Police in the reliance on them as a single agency to regulate behaviour in encampments that may not be being positively influenced through local laws and council practice. Additionally, and most importantly, there is a need for a greater role played by social and therapeutic services.

Victoria Police through the routine deployment of the Neighbourhood Policing Team are committed to continuing to play a pivotal role in this space no matter the outcome of this review.

Local Laws

An examination of the social and legal landscape reveals the City of Port Phillip's local laws to be inadequate in their ability to limit or stop the encampments. The existing provisions and exemptions within the relevant local laws, in particular Local Law 42, appears to have enabled growth in encampments and a degree of permanency at some locations. As a result, there is a heavy and ever-increasing reliance on police by the community to regulate behaviour within the encampments.

I have addressed councillors in chambers on this challenge on two occasions in the preceding months. I support councillors in their commitment to local law reform including but not limited to Local Law 17, Local Law 42 and Local Law 43 and encourage council to continue to consult with Victoria Police to ensure the workability of such reforms.

Social Services

The complexity of encampments, homelessness, those purporting to be homeless and their nexus to other health and social challenges is universally acknowledged by agencies operating in this space. It is submitted that the principal remedies to these challenges sit within the remit of social and therapeutic intervention and housing.

The roundtable resulted in a strong presence by support agencies, great collaboration, and a genuine desire to make a positive difference. The roundtable also revealed an apparent limited awareness by those agencies of community sentiment in addition to the caring and interventionist role that local laws officers and police engage in day in day out at all hours of the day.

It is hoped that by shining a light on this issue and coming together in a roundtable format will see an uplift in social, therapeutic, and housing support for those living in encampments.

Recommendations

The amendments to the local laws as described are strongly recommended with a caveat that execution is by way of a tiered response on the ground namely:

1. Intervention - that social and therapeutic intervention is undertaken primarily, intervention is swift and alternative living, sleeping, and gathering arrangements are implemented.
2. Assessment – that social and therapeutic agencies swiftly determine needs and alternative living, sleeping, medical and gathering arrangements are implemented should they be determined.
3. Enforcement - is undertaken by Local Laws Officers and the Neighbourhood Policing Team to dismantle encampments occupied by those who have rejected support or whom have been deemed as not requiring support.

It is recommended that the local laws are not whole of City of Port Phillip specific but with an ability for temporary application by gazette or otherwise to a problem area under the council's management.

It is recommended that a gathering place be established away from residential and business zones for use by those who would ordinarily camp in the street or other public place with access to medical, housing, and other support services.

It is recommended that social and therapeutic services employ a collaborative joined up response that steers and guides participants to services away from the encampments. This presents an opportunity to rethink an in-situ care model that is currently employed by some support agencies that unwittingly, could be supporting the presence of some encampments.

It is recommended that council rapid response cleaning teams be deployed contemporaneously with police and local laws joint patrols post the introduction of the revised local laws.

Conclusion

I take this opportunity to thank you and Nellie once again for your tireless efforts in facilitating the roundtable.

The challenges we face in this space are whole of community challenges requiring a joint and collaborative approach in addition to creative remedies. Until the foundation issue of encampments and those choosing to sleep rough, is positively impacted, only then will community sentiment begin to shift in a positive direction.

Yours sincerely

Brett COLOE

About Windana

Providing connected services for more people in need.

Windana provides services across Victoria for adults and young people experiencing alcohol and other drug harms, family violence, mental health challenges and social disadvantage.

Our Model of Care puts clients at the centre of what we do to create positive change in people's lives. We work with families, communities and other organisations to deliver trauma informed, equitable, culturally safe and integrated services based on evidence and practice wisdom.

By intervening early and creating purposeful partnerships, we help clients achieve improved outcomes while reducing demand on acute services. ### Windana's interest in the proposed Local Law amendments and community safety

Since 1985, Windana has occupied the historic property at the corner of Alma Road and Chapel Street in St Kilda.

While we now operate 15 sites across Victoria, our St Kilda location serves as the central hub of our organisation. It's where we offer a comprehensive range of alcohol and other drug services to the local community, including our adult residential withdrawal program, counselling, Family Program, harm reduction initiatives, peer support groups and community clinic.

We also use our St Kilda base to collaborate with local partners on the frontlines who share our vision of improving outcomes for marginalised people.

Summary

Windana opposes the proposed amendments to Sections 17(1b), 42 and 43 of the Local Laws, as we believe that making it an offence for vulnerable people to sit, sleep, lay or camp on Council land will create more challenges for people already experiencing complexity. Rather than amend Local Laws, we recommend Council take actions that will help people to connect with services that will improve their circumstances and enhance community safety.

Following the Community Safety Roundtable on 19 March, Windana welcomes the chance to provide recommendations to Ian Clarke AM for the final report to be presented to Council on 21 May 2025.

The following recommendations:

- Identify both short-term and long-term actions to increase public safety and perceptions of safety in Port Phillip.
- Offer evidence-based, person-centred alternatives to the proposed amendments.
- Consider Council's three objectives for the Community Safety Roundtable process.
- Emphasise the power of assertive outreach, lived experience, early intervention and challenging stigma.
- Are aligned with our areas of expertise and focus.
- Put people first and take a human-rights based approach.

Recommendations

Recommendation 1 (short term): That the City of Port Phillip collaborates with local agencies to enhance the ability of Local Laws Officers to provide support and referrals that address the complex needs of our community's most vulnerable people.

Local Laws Officers are authorised to issue warnings and infringements and impound items. However, Local Laws Officers – in partnership with Victoria Police on Joint Patrols and with access to the Rapid Response Team – also play a critical role in connecting vulnerable people with services. Council can leverage Officers' direct contact with people sleeping rough by enhancing their outreach capacity. This could be achieved by developing a welfare-based patrol model where Local Laws Officers collaborate with agencies (e.g. alcohol and drug services) on joint patrols. Including lived experience, e.g. by a Peer Worker accompanying officers on patrols, would provide culturally safe support and improve outcomes for service users<sup>1</sup>.

Recommendation 2 (short term): That the City of Port Phillip supports recommendations from VAADA for funding and structural changes that will improve Victoria's response to alcohol and other drug harms, leading to place-based improvements in community safety.

Victoria's alcohol and other drug system faces growing demand for treatment, increasing complexity (including homelessness, mental health) and service gaps. In their 2025 State Budget Submission 'Fixing the Foundations', VAADA provided 39 recommendations necessary to improve the safety of Victorians. Themes include addressing immediate funding shortfalls, development of a Harm Reduction Framework, urgently funding Aboriginal women's treatment and increasing culturally responsive services for priority CALD communities<sup>2</sup>. Regardless of the upcoming budget outcome, VAADA's recommendations offer structural solutions to reduce substance-related harms, and by advocating for these, Council can address challenges faced on the streets.

Recommendation 3 (long term): That the City of Port Phillip coordinates the implementation of an established, collaborative early intervention program model for vulnerable people to increase safety, manage risks, reduce homelessness and address dynamic criminogenic factors that bring people into contact with the justice system.

Council has an opportunity to be the catalyst for a program that provides direct service delivery to at-risk people (including brief intervention, outreach support and service coordination), enhanced by capacity building and reform. Windana's Living Free Project (2017-2024) offers a model that can be adapted to have positive impact in Port Phillip by adjusting two place-based factors: target cohort and the combination of local agencies that would collaborate to provide specialist support. The Living Free model works – an evaluation found that participants benefited from a range of positive outcomes including reduced involvement in offending behaviour, access to safe long-term accommodation, reduced problematic AOD use and increased engagement with services relevant to needs<sup>3</sup>.

Council's role in Living Free could involve:

- Coordination – Assembling the appropriate services and organisations to establish a steering committee
- Capacity building – Enhancing skills across police, the justice system and key services that have contact with vulnerable people
- Advocacy – Creating sustainable change by exploring, documenting and responding to systemic gaps that contribute to homelessness and complex social disadvantage in City of Port Phillip.

Recommendation 4 (long term): That the City of Port Phillip leads an anti-stigma campaign in collaboration with alcohol and other drug, homelessness and mental health services to promote inclusion, use of services, outcomes for people facing social disadvantage and perceptions of community safety.

Stigma has negative impacts on community safety – including by delaying treatment-seeking behaviour, exacerbating complex mental health and alcohol and other drug issues, and increasing social isolation and lack of perceived safety<sup>4</sup>. Challenging stigma has been prioritised at different levels of government – including through the Australian Government's Draft National Stigma and Discrimination Reduction Strategy. At the local level, an anti-stigma campaign could focus on alcohol and other drugs, mental health and homelessness and be used to:

- Encourage help-seeking behaviours → Preventing exacerbation of social issues by encouraging people to connect with services<sup>5</sup>
- Reducing desire for social distance → Increasing community perceptions of safety (for example, the Time To Change campaign decreased desire for distance from people experiencing severe mental health problems)
- Enhancing knowledge and attitudes<sup>5</sup> → Positive relationships have been found between anti-stigma campaign awareness and community attitudes, knowledge and beliefs of target groups.

Council's anti-stigma campaign could engage the community through media and education and should leverage anti-stigma work taking place at other levels.

We thank you for the opportunity to submit Windana's recommendations to this important process and are available to speak further on any recommendations covered – including exploration of a collaborative program using the Living Free Project model.

OPERATING PROTOCOL / POLICY OPERATING STATEMENT

Adopted by:

Chief Executive Officer
City of Melbourne

Chief Commissioner
Victoria Police

Introduction

These protocols set out operating practice agreed and trialled by City of Melbourne and Victoria Police following ongoing engagement with the homeless sector service providers.

City of Melbourne (CoM), Victoria Police (VicPol), Department of Health and Human Services, and the homeless sector will partner to create an environment:

- That feels safe, friendly and accessible for the 900,000 people who daily live, work, study or socialise in the city
- Where people who are homeless are connected to the services and support that they individually request or require and their welfare is protected

By partnering we will ensure a stronger and more immediate approach to impacts on the amenity, enjoyment and use of the public space.

The key themes of the new operating protocols are:

- stronger connection and partnerships with service providers
- earlier intervention by CoM with support from VicPol
- more assertive actions by CoM and as required by VicPol
- lower tolerance of street clutter and amenity impacts
- a high level of consistency in application of the Local Law.

The parties commit to regularly reviewing the operation and effectiveness of the protocols in consultation with homeless sector.

Protocols

1. CoM will ensure rough sleepers are connected with appropriate services:
  - a. to commence the pathway to housing
  - b. to address drivers of homelessness which may include being a victim of family Violence, alcohol addiction, drug addiction or poor mental health.
2. Belongings should be kept to a reasonable minimum, being two bags which can be carried and other bedding like a sleeping bag, blanket or pillow.

3. Belongings not to be kept in the public space are mattresses, furniture, tents or any other structure that could be deemed as camping.
4. Items left unattended which impact on the amenity, enjoyment and use of the public space or that create a potential security risk will be removed with personal items stored and the remainder disposed of.
5. In general, groups of people sleeping rough in close proximity will be strongly discouraged due to the heightened amenity impacts and the risks to welfare for the individuals involved.
6. Behaviour in the public space should not impact the enjoyment of other users of the public place.
7. Unacceptable behaviour such as using drug paraphernalia, blocking the thoroughfare, intimidation or unruly activity which impacts on others' enjoyment of the public space is not permissible.
8. Entrances to businesses and residences must not be blocked and customers are to be free to enter and exit all buildings when open.
9. Fire escape doorways are not to be blocked at any time.
10. Access for people with a disability must not be impeded.

Relevant Operational Processes

- CoM now has a dedicated Daily Support Team delivered by Launch Housing. The team delivers daily engagement with and provides support to people sleeping rough. The team is not involved in addressing non compliance matters.
- CoM will continue to work with the homeless sector to find appropriate storage solutions for people sleeping rough.
- VicPol Officers will not be authorised under Council's Activities Local Law, rather they will support CoM Authorised Officers if and when a safety risk is perceived.
- Authorised Officers, VicPol and the homeless sector (including the daily support team) work together daily to address immediate issues.
- The group, consisting of City of Melbourne (CoM), Victoria Police (VicPol), Department of Health and Human Services, and the homeless sector will meet weekly to ensure the appropriate and timely level of support and services are provided to the rough sleepers and that there is a balanced approach to support, compliance and enforcement.

- CoM has recruited 4 additional local law officers with the requisite skills and will upskill other Authorised Officers to deal with the complex issues relating to rough sleeping and ensure that those officers have appropriate and ongoing training.
- CoM will continue to undertake occupational health and safety assessments in considering all proposed actions.

Scenario Examples

- A small number (up to 4) of rough sleepers set up during the evening/night with their two bags and other bedding (like a sleeping bag, blanket or pillow), and sleep parallel alongside the shop fronts without blocking the doorways. When each individual leaves the area they take their belongings.
  - CoM has no issue.
- A small number (up to 4) of rough sleepers set up during the day with their two bags and other bedding (like a sleeping bag, blanket or pillow), and sleep parallel alongside the shop fronts without blocking the doorways. When each individual leaves the area they take their belongings.
  - CoM will monitor for breaches of the Protocol.
- A group of rough sleepers set up in one city block during the day which intimidates the other uses of the public space and impacts amenity.
  - CoM will use its power under the Activities Local Law regarding behaviour (part 2), specifically nuisance (clause 2.1a) and amenity (clause 2.1b) to take action and will call upon VicPol to intervene if safety risk is perceived.
- A camp is established which includes tents, furniture and bikes impacting the enjoyment and amenity of the public space for other users.
  - CoM will use its power under the Activities Local Law regarding behaviour (part 2), specifically nuisance (clause 2.1a), amenity (clause 2.1b) and camping (clause 2.8) to take action and will call upon VicPol to intervene if safety risk is perceived.
- An individual is consuming an illegal drug and or is behaving aggressively in public, impacting the enjoyment and amenity of the public space for other users.
  - CoM will ensure that VicPol is informed if criminal behaviour is present and/or a safety risk is perceived.
